Coast Guard Ready to Man Ships in Case Of Strike

Discharges Halted; Navy to Act, Too; Hope of Peaceful Settlement Grows

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The Coast Guard stopped all discharges last night—making all its present 24,000 men ready for duty if the maritime strike is not averted.

The Navy was reported drawing a like order, as part of its plans for helping sail the 3100 ships due to be seized if the Nation-wide walkout is not headed off.

Hope of a peaceful settlement grew yesterday, when the National Maritime Union backed down still further from its demand for a basic 40-hour week for seamen. Sailors and engine room men now work 56 hours, stewards 63.

Censorship Imposed

The Labor Department peace meetings went on all day yesterday under the rigid censorship clamped down last week by Secretary Schwellenbach. Both labor and employer spokesmen refused to discuss their progress, saying Schwellenbach had bound them not to.

All official news of the meetings comes through the Schwellenbach censorship. Last night's bulletin, issued by Edgar L. Warren, director of conciliation, said most of what was a fair work week for seafaring men. Warren said the unions had receded from their first demands, but did not say how much.

The peace meetings will go on at 11 o'clock this morning.

Strike Plans Pushed

Both Government and unions leaders carried on—outside the peace meetings—with hurried plans for the maritime strike.

The unions hope to tie up American shipping on the Gulf, Pacific and Atlantic Coasts and in many foreign ports as well.

The Government plans to seize the ships as soon as it is clear that the negotiations have fallen into another deadlock. Then it will try to load them with soldiers, strike-breakers and other manpower and sail them with Navy, Coast Guard, Maritime Service and other seagoing personnel.

The joint committee which started coordinating all Government agencies for this effort last Friday was busy again yesterday.

Strike Support Promised

The AFL Seafarers International Union told Schwellenbach yesterday that its 62,000 members would respect any picket lines that were set up by the committee for maritime unity—the group of seven maritime unions which have pledged to stick together during the strike.

The CMU got even bigger assurances from Paris, where Louis Saillant, secretary general of the World Federation of Trade Unions, said he did not think French longshore workers would handle strike-breaking ships.

Saillant was later reported by the United Press as going much farther, to declare that "all unions of all countries belonging to the

Eugene Meyer is Elected President of World Bank

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The executive directors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday unanimously elected Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, as first president of the world credit institution.

Meyer promptly pledged to devote his "full energies" to the seven billion, 670 million dollar organization. Consequently he will cease to act as publisher or editor of his paper or to be responsible for its editorial policy. He will retain its ownership, however.

Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross disclosed yesterday that the suggestion for Meyer to head the "World Bank," created by the Bretton Woods Agreements, came from President Truman. Ross quoted Mr. Truman as "delighted at his appointment."

By reason of the United States being the chief contributor to the International Bank, the choice of an American as president was tacitly agreed to at an international monetary conference at Savannah two months ago.

Meyer was nominated by the bank's American director, Emilio G. Collado, on instructions from Treasury Secretary Vinson, chairman of the National Advisory Committee.

In a statement to the executive directors at their meeting here yesterday noon, Meyer said:

"I feel honored by my election by the executive directors as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, but above all I feel a profound sense of responsibility. I shall devote my full energies to the task.

"The world is well aware today of the food famine. At the same time we must become equally aware that the world is starving for the products of industry.

"The bank was organized to promote reconstruction and development in both these essential activities."

Millers See Bread Crisis Eased Soon

Stillwell Tells of European Black Markets as Food Lines Form in U. S.

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A gradual easing of the critical bread shortage, prevailing in virtually every city in the country this week, may be expected soon, the Millers National Federation said yesterday.

The announcement by the millers' group came on the basis of several interesting developments in the food situation yesterday. Listed among them were:

1. Oklahoma wheat farmers told Director Fiorello LaGuardia of UNRRA that they were ready to dump their grain on the ground unless the Government changes its policy for requisitioning grain.

Southwestern Growers Protest

A committee of 45 visited LaGuardia in Oklahoma City to protest the order that half the grain delivered to elevators be sold to the Government (Commodity Credit Corporation) at ceiling prices.

Oklahoma and other Southwestern wheat growers declare that the recent Government wheat purchase, under which growers got a 30-cent-a-bushel bonus for wheat sold for famine relief, benefited only Northern farmers. The plan gave Southern wheat growers a raw deal, they claimed, providing higher prices after wheat in their area had been marketed. LaGuardia promised to carry their protests to Government officials.

2. Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) asserted that Russia tried to "gain a political advantage" in the recent French elections by shipping wheat to France in American cargo vessels just before the voting.

He made the statement before the Senate Small Business Committee, which is studying complaints of maladministration in the world relief program. James A. Stillwell, State Department food adviser, was asked by Wherry for his comment on the Russian shipments.

Black Markets Widespread

Stillwell responded that only Secretary of State Byrnes or Undersecretary Acheson could give the department's attitude. Wherry asked that they be called as witnesses.

UNRRA has sent Russia fats, oils and sugar, Stillwell told the committee, to meet what he termed "a real emergency."

Black market operations in Europe are so widespread, he told the committee, that many people must depend on them to keep alive. Farmers have hoarded some food in famine areas, he said, but most governments had drawn it out by hoarding drives.

(3) UNRRA officials are considering plan to send range horses abroad as work animals and for food. An UNRRA food consultant, James T. Burt, is on his way to South Dakota to discuss the plan with ranchers who have advanced it.

Ads Urge Conservation

(4) A nationwide advertising campaign for food conservation by the nation's retailers is now under way under the auspices of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. Unusual response to appeal for advertising support of the aims of the Famine Emergency Committee by the nation's merchants has been reported.

(5) One cause of the scarcity of meat is due to farmers holding back their cattle from the market, Rae E. Walters, Chicago regional OPA administrator said yesterday. They are gambling on removal of price control June 30, he said. Contributory causes, he said, were the recent rail strike and purchases of meat for famine relief.

The report from the Millers Federation forecasting slowly improving conditions in the present country-wide bread shortage, was good news to housewives from coast to coast.

Bread and meat lines formed in virtually every city throughout the

Truman Acts In Service Merger Jam

Decides to Break Deadlock, Calls Military Leaders To White House

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman has decided to break the Army-Navy deadlock over a merger of the armed forces.

In his role as Commander in Chief, he will resolve the points of difference between the two.

Thereafter, Mr. Truman will forward his ideas to Congress and ask that appropriate committees use them as the basis for legislation.

Mr. Truman's decision to act as arbiter—the only decision that appeared to be open to him—was announced at the White House after he had conferred for 90 minutes with Army and Navy leaders.

Mr. Truman recommended a single department of national defense back in December, saying to Congress:

"If there is ever going to be another global conflict, it is sure to take place simultaneously on land, sea and in the air, with weapons of ever greater speed and range.

"Our combat forces must work together in one team as they have never been required to work together in the past."

Quarrel for Months

Top Army and Navy men, though the best of friends, have quarreled for months over Mr. Truman's merger proposal. Recently he asked them to try and reconcile their differences and report back to him by June 1. Then yesterday he summoned them to meet in his office.

Secretary of War Patterson was the first to stride into the White House lobby. The big brass followed in single file: Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff; Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz, Chief of the Army Air Forces, and Maj. Gen. Lauris M. Norstad, new chief of the war planning division of the General Staff.

Secretary of Navy Forrestal came in a minute or so later, followed by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations; Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations, and Vice Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Deputy Naval Chief for Air.

Leahy Is Present

In President Truman's office, these were joined by Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's Chief of Staff; Brig. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide, and Capt. Clark Clifford, naval aide.

After the conference broke up and reporters were besieging the principals, there was much good-natured talk but no revelations.

"Don't ask us to smile," said General Eisenhower to the photographers, and smiled as he said it.

Secretary Forrestal, laughing off questions, said that he had always favored Judge Patterson for the job of secretary of a single department of national defense. Patterson returned the compliment.

Announces Decision

Finally, White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross emerged from the President's office and announced Mr. Truman's decision to decide personally on the outstanding points of disagreement between the Army and Navy.

Ross said that Mr. Truman was compelled to make the decision in view of his role as Commander in Chief. He added:

"After the President has resolved the points of difference, his ideas will be the joint ideas of the Army and Navy and will be presented to Congress in an appropriate way to serve as a basis for legislation."

Ross said the President didn't care to prophecy as to whether action on the merger would come at this session of Congress.

At any rate, it appeared that Mr. Truman after waiting seven months for a meeting of minds, had taken the controversy out of the hands of the Army and Navy leaders. Presumably, they would have to abide by the decision he makes.

Both Sides Concede

Both sides have made concessions, but they are understood still to disagree on the central idea in the whole plan; that is to say, a merger.

The Army insists that all the armed forces be consolidated in a single Department of National Defense, with a civilian secretary at the top.

The Navy, it is understood, opposes the Army plan and wants the War and Navy Departments to retain their separate status. However, the admirals would agree to have a new cabinet officer who could act as coordinator of the air, land and sea forces, provided a War and Navy each continued to have a cabinet officere as at present.

Gen. Marshall Confers With China Leaders

Nanking, However, Not Optimistic on Prospects for Peace

Nanking, June 4 (AP).—General Marshall, in two conferences, talked today with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Communist leader Chou En-lai in a new attempt to find a formula of peace for strife-torn China.

The meetings generated no special optimism in this anxious capital, however. Communist sources expressed doubt as to the chances of an early agreement.

The special American envoy talked for more than five hours with the generalissimo—their first meeting since Chiang left Nanking May 23 for Mukden to obtain a first-hand view of the critical Manchurian situation. The conference was called by Marshall.

Immediately after, Marshall went into a two-hour conference with Chou En-lai, chief negotiator for the Communists.

Dispatches from the Manchurian front disagreed as to whether government forces successfully had crossed the little Sungari River in their slow northward march toward Harbin. One report had them on the river's north bank, some 70 miles from the key north Manchurian city.

The Communist radio at Yenan meanwhile accused government forces of renewing their attack on Communist positions in Hopen Province, north China, in violation of the special cease-fire pact negotiated for that area last month.

Russia Bars 'Total Peace,' Bevin Asserts

Briton Calls Soviet Idea of Democracy A Great Obstacle

London, June 4 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin declared today that the Russian idea of security and democracy constituted "one of the greatest obstacles to peace." He said permanent peace in Europe could be assured "only if Russia enters freely into the European settlement."

Bevin, reviewing the deadlocked Paris Foreign Ministers Conference, urged the Soviet Union to reconsider its rejection of the American plan for a four-power pact to control German armaments, and to grasp that "great opportunity" before it was too late.

"It May Never Come Again"

"I say to the Soviet government that if you value peace above all else, do not miss it: it may never come again," the Foreign Secretary declared in a speech to Commons.

"If we don't want to have total war we must have total peace," Bevin asserted.

Looking toward a resumption of the four-power talks June 15, Bevin said he proposed "to make another effort at agreement before deciding on any final alternative course." If the talks failed, he said, he would insist upon adoption of the American proposal to place the disputed Europeans treaties before a 21-ration general peace conference.

Replies to Molotov

Replying to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Bevin declared that "One of the greatest obstacles to peace" was the Soviet idea that the Russian method alone represented democracy. Along with the idea that Russia could have security "only when every other country in the world has adopted the Soviet system."

Bevin also put forth his own

Wage Hikes Of 2 to 50% Approved for Enlisted Men

Overseas Veterans, Fathers Spared From Induction By Amendment

BULLETIN

The Senate last night approved, 67 to 4, sharp pay increases for privates and other low enlisted grades in the armed services, with no increases for warrant officers or commissioned personnel.

The increases approved are: Privates, 50 per cent to $75 a month; privates first class, 48 per cent to $80; corporals, 36 per cent to $90; sergeants, 28 per cent to $100; staff sergeants, 12½ per cent to $106; technical sergeants, 3 per cent to $118; master sergeants, 2 per cent to $140.

The Senate also voted to prohibit reinduction of anyone who served overseas in this war or longer than six months in this country.

By the Associated Press

The Administration won a major round in the draft struggle late yesterday when the Senate voted, 53 to 26, to make youths of 18 and 19 subject to Selective Service once again.

The Senate by voice vote also wrote into the bill a prohibition against induction of men with dependent children, including foster or adopted children.

Then the Chamber drove on toward a vote on the broader controversy over extending the Selective Service Act until May 15, 1947, or depending upon volunteer enlistments alone.

Approve Gurney Amendment

The decision on the teen-agers came when the Senate approved an amendment by Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.), who said induction of the youths was necessary if fathers and persons who have served in the armed forces more than 18 months are to be discharged this fall.

If the extension measure itself wins Senate passage, it must return to the House for action. That branch, in voting the draft a nine-month lease on life, decided to exempt the teen-agers.

Meantime Selective Service is operating under a temporary extension until July 1. This stop-gap measure provides that 18 and 19-year-old youths shall not be inducted, a stipulation that was inserted on the insistence of a House majority.

Argues Against Teen-Age Draft

During yesterday's debate, Senator Stanfill (R., Ky.) argued against the teen-age draft, appealing to his colleagues not to introduce "impressionable" youths "to adult life through Army sergeants."

Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.) argued for a return to the volunteer system, saying:

"If ever we are going to get rid of the military hangover of conscription now is the time to cut loose."

He ridiculed any idea that this Nation's strength internationally depends upon a "few additional conscripts made up largely of 18-year-old boys."

Senator Austin (R., Vt.) argued, on the other hand, for full extension until May 15 of next year, including 18- and 19-year-olds. He said failure to do so would "weaken" this country and amount to "turning its back" upon solemn international commitments.

Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.) had served notice the Senate would sit as far into the night as necessary.

From Stanfill came the cry: "We do not use boys in our police

U. S. to Probe New Mexico Primary Vote

Unofficial Returns Give Chavez Early Lead Over Dempsey

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 4 (AP). The United States Attorney General's Office authorized an investigation into New Mexico's primary today while Democrats were making their choice between Senator Dennis Chavez and Gov. John J. Dempsey for United States Senator.

K. Gill Shaffer, assistant United States Attorney, said the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been asked by an undisclosed source to check complaints of irregularities, even to the counting of ballots.

An extremely light vote was reported from most sections of the State.

Chavez Won 6 Years Ago

The first unofficial returns from 26 incomplete precincts of the State's 869 gave Chavez 481 votes to 326 for Dempsey.

Chavez won the contest between the two six years ago by slightly over 2500 votes. This year's winner meets Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former War Secretary, in the general election. Hurley was unopposed for the Republican nomination.

The Democrats also marked ballots for Governor, two seats in Congress, lesser State offices and members of the Legislature. The Republicans had only three contests, for Governor, Congress and State Supreme Court.

Polish Party Assailed

Murder Victim Admitted His Interest in Men

Police Are Seeking Blond Veteran in War Club Slaying

A sex angle was injected into the Indian war club slaying of Don B. Glendening last night as police searched for the suspected killer, a blond young former serviceman.

Friends of the murdered man told detectives that Glendening had freely admitted homosexual interests, but that he disclaimed such an interest in the veteran.

They related to police that he had told them he was interested in the young man because he wanted to teach him a vocation—radio repairing.

Earlier, police had recovered Glendening's stolen car in front of 509 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Suspect Is Described

A witness, Mrs. Laura Suber of 513 Rhode Island ave. nw., told police she had seen a man park the car there between noon and 1 p. m. Saturday—within a few hours of the time Glendening, 42-year-old radio repairman, was clubbed to death in his apartment at 321 E st. ne.

She said the man was of medium build, about five feet six inches tall, had very broad shoulders, long wavy dark blond hair, was wearing gray slacks and a light-colored sport shirt and was carrying a light jacket, possibly an Army combat jacket.

Police said this description tallied with that of the young veteran.

Mrs. Suber said the man got out of the car, locked it and then walked north on 6th st. nw.

The automobile, object of an intensive police search, went unnoticed until 9 a. m. yesterday when it was spotted by Gilbert Nielson, 27, of 5722 64th ave., Riveredale, Md., a Keystone Automobile Club salesman.

Police said that about 12 finger-

Federal Union Hits Senate Rider to Ban Jobs for Strikers

The United Public Workers of America (CIO) yesterday declared it will "if necessary" revise its constitution to prohibit strikes in Federal service.

The union's statement was a bitter denunciation of the proposed Senate rider which would bar Federal employment of persons whose unions advocate strikes against the Government.

The rider was attached to the Agriculture Department's Appropriation bill by the Senate. House concurrence is still required.

The union's statement charged it is "an attempt to deal with an important matter of public policy by means of a rider, without proper consideration or debate. As passed by the Senate, it constitutes an infringement of civil liberties and, if it should become law, and were tested in the courts, would certainly be found unconstitutional."

It attacked the "interpretation" of the union's no-strike policy and said "we will not conduct strikes against the Federal Government and have no real interest in debating whether the right to do so exists."

The union maintained its present policy does not assert the right of Government employes to strike and added that if the rider becomes law, "we will take whatever steps are necessary to satisfy the legal technicalities and to forestall any union-busting attempts to ap-

Vote From Southern Italy Puts Monarchy Back in Running

Rome, June 4 (U.P.).—King Humbert was back in the running tonight as returns from Rome and southern Italy shifted toward the monarchy against a republic in the two-day referendum.

At 11 p. m. the ministry of the interior announced the republic still had a "slight majority" but there had been no new nation-wide figures since 6 p. m. when the republic led, 5,369,155 to 4,004,145.

Rome favored the monarchy by 320,192 to 270,200.

With about 16,500,000 votes counted in the national assembly race, Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democratic Party led the Socialists with the Communists third.

The interior ministry estimated that 555 of the 573 Assembly seats would go as follows: Christian Democrats, 195; Socialists, 123; Communists, 113; Democratic Union, 31; Uomo Qualunque, 26; Republican Italians, 23; Monarchist Liberty Bloc, 13; Actionists, 8; Paris Republican Concentration, 3; Unionists for Forty-ninth U. S. State, 2; Christian Socialists, 1, and other parties, 17.

dustries in production-lagging countries.

Meyer's attitude toward the banking and lending function was expressed as early as 1920. In an address to a meeting of the American Manufacturers Export Association, he said:

"Credit, I think, is a little like some drugs. In the hands of people who know its powers but also its dangers, it is the most helpful, useful, and healing thing in the world, but, like those drugs, with misuse, with carelessness, and with habitual indulgence to excess, it can become the most demoralizing, disintegrating, and destructive agency."

The International Bank and its companion organization, the International Fund, both set up under the Bretton Woods Agreements, have not yet begun functional operations. The bank is expected to make some test loans before the end of this year and engage in large-scale activity by 1947.

Begins Fourth Career

In accepting the position, Meyer begins, at 70, a fourth career. He has preceded it with the vocations of private banker and financier, Federal official, and publisher.

After graduating from Yale in 1895, he headed his own investment firm until 1917, when he entered the Government service, working on the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense and on the War Industries Board. In 1918, he was appointed by President Wilson as a director of the War Finance Corporation. He was managing director of the organization until 1927, when he was appointed member of the Federal Farm Loan Board.

From 1930 to 1933 he was governor of the Federal Reserve Board and also served as the first chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

He bought The Post in 1933.

Five-Year Term of Office

His new position carries a term of office of five years. As president of the World Bank, he will be chief of its operating staff, working with its 12 executive directors. Of these, one each is named by the United States, United Kingdom, China, France and India. The remaining seven are elected by the votes of the other 33 member nations who own, finance and operate the bank.

The bank's function is to promote the international flow of long-term capital to meet reconstruction and development needs. It may make direct loans from its own resources or from borrowed funds. It also may guarantee loans made by private investors.

The total amount subscribed to the bank by member nations is $7,670,000,000, of which the United States has contributed $3,175,000,000, or more than 41 per cent.

Long-Term Loans

Except in special cases, the bank's loans and guarantees will be long-term and for specific projects. It will market its own securities, probably principally in this country.

The bank's sister organization, the International Fund, is headed by Camille Gutt of Belgium and is principally concerned with the stability of international exchange.

Meyer has indicated that he will assume his new duties in a "relatively few days," according to bank officials.

Union Organizers Meet To Organize Union

The committee, which claimed rank-and-file support, said it would ask the UAW executive board meeting here for provisions in contracts the UAW holds with employers.

Observers said that the demand grew out of charges that Walter Reuther, UAW president, has failed to follow seniority in making appointments.

ply the rider to members of this organization."

It called the rider a vote "to punish citizens for asserting a right" and asserted the proposed measure "would deprive citizens of employment with the Government if they belonged to an organizatoin which asserted the right to strike."

The statement pointed out that "we have never conducted or threatened to conduct a strike against the Federal Government" and said "we are attempting to learn what the rider means in legal terms (if it will have any legal effect whatever)."

UPWA officials cited a clause in its constitution which says "it shall not be the policy of this union to engage in strikes" as proof of its no-strike policy. Opponents say the constitution, in another clause, stipulates procedure to be followed when it is considering a strike.

force at home. Then why should we use them for political work in Germany and Japan?"

He maintained the armed forces could fill their requirements from a reservoir of a million men between 20 and 30 who he said had been deferred during wartime for service on the home front, plus volunteers.

Both Stanfill and Senator Capper (R., Kans.) opposed the use of "conscripted forces for occupation duties."

Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.) argued that it is unnecessary "to draft anyone." He maintained sufficient volunteers could be obtained by increasing the pay scale.

He drafted a substitute bill which would keep selective service on the statute books, but would suspend the operation of the draft until such time as it ordered renewed by vote of Congress.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) declared the vast majority of letters from men in the armed forces favor the extension of selective service for another year.

The schedule calls for hearings on budgets of the family service society and Salvation Army today; of the Visiting Nurse Sserice, Boy Scouts and Houkins House on June 7; Community Health Center-Hospitalization fund and Campfire Girls on June 10; boys club, Community Chest, and council of Social agencies on June 11; Girls club on June 13; and a summary meeting on June 14.

Members of the budget committee which will review the local budgets include Mr. Smilt, Mrs. William Zimmerman, 3d, Marvin Wilson and P. H. Butler, jr.

BRITISH

idea of a federation of German states, which he declared would best fit into a loong-range plan for international control. He said Britain was willing to see the Saar go to France, but that it looked upon the Ruhr valley as a great potential for peace and raising standards of living throughout Europe. He suggested the Ruhr might become a separate province under international control, to be fitted ultimately into federal Germany.

The foreign secretary, referring to the Russian attitude in the Paris Conference, said:

"It is difficult for us to accept the rule of one party or one nation. It is an intolerable situation and we shall never get peace if that goes on."

Appeals to U. S.

Bevin implored the United States to disregard Soviet rebuffs and continue seeking a four-power, 25-year pact to insure German demilitarization. He urged Russia to accept this proposal as "giving the greatest possible hope for the removal of misunderstanding and the creation of confidence.

Meantime, he said, Britain would continue trying to extend her 20-year friendship pact with the Soviet Union to 50 years.

Bevin denied any attempt on the part of the United States and Britain to dictate to Russia. Replying to Molotov's charge that a British-American bloc existed at the Paris Conference, Bevin took up the European settlement disputes one after another.

Of Trieste he said "the only attempt at compromise over this problem was made by Britain and the United States. There was no move at all on the part of the Soviet to meet that compromise. I cannot bring myself to hand over Trieste to Yugoslavia. Trieste must be an international port and not an international pawn in the game of politics."

Obstacles in Balkans

On the Balkan question, he said Britain "has met with abstacles everywhere in trying to reach agreements with Romania, Hungary and other countries." He said Britain would not allow its representatives to do anything to hinder proper relations between the Soviet and these countries, "but we do ask reciprocation."

On reparations he said if Italy were called upon to pay, her ability to export and earn foreign exchange would be correspondingly reduced and the assistance she would require from abroad would be increased.

Concerning the Danube, he called for prompt writing of the peace with Austria and opening of river traffic, adding that "nothing will give greater condence for peace" than if the Soviet were "ready and willing to settle the Austrian problem together with the Italian problem and that of the Danube Basin."

Saying that Russian rejection of United States Secretary of State Byrnes' plan for a four-power peace treaty was a matter for "profound regret," he added:

"I make one appeal to the United States. Do not be daunted by a first refusal due to unjustified suspicion."

Dispute Soviet Theory

"There is, I think, rather unfortunately running all through the speeches and writings of our Soviet friends a theory that they alone represent the workers, that they alone are Democratic . . .

"This leads to the idea that the security of Russia can only be maintained when every country in the world has adopted the Soviet system.

"For us in this country who started our industrial revolution over 150 years ago, to adopt the Russian method would really be retrogressive.

"If we are to get real agreement on both sides, we must undertake to develop our political institutions in our own way without attempting to impose one system upon the other."

World Federation will be directly or indirectly mixed up in this worker conflict."

Saillant, the United Press said, stated that seamen's unions in Britain, France, Russia, Belgium, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Denmark had been instructed to take measures of solidarity with the American maritime unions.

This broad announcement brought prompt challenge from American students of the labor situation. The WFTU is a world association of national labor groups—such as the CIO and the AFL. When the CIO took its plea for strike aid direct to the WFTU instead of sending it through the national organization there was probably a breach of proper procedure. This, however, would doubtless be regarded as a minor matter.

But Saillant is not an executive, it was pointed out, but just a paid employe of the WFTU main office, and has no power to order any unions anywhere to do anything. Theer were indications that Saillant's statement yesterday would be taken up with the WFTU executive committee when it meets in Moscow, June 16.

The Labor Department yesterday started a second set of maritime negotiations, for the marine firemen and the American Shipowners Association. The firemen gave way on their first demands, but no details were given out. These meetings will resume at 9:30 this morning.

country, the United Press reported last night, and many persons were turned away with neither bread nor meat. City-by-city reports said that bakery and meat shops still operating were generally running out of supplies by noon.

Two signs that the Nation's worst bread shortage will soon be on the wane, were seen by the Millers Federation at Chicago. First, the new spring wheat crop just started in Texas and Oklahoma is running 25 per cent above preharvest expectations. Second is the Department of Agriculture plan, announced Monday, to loan wheat from famine relief supplies to millers who are out of grain stocks.

Herman Steen, secretary of the federation, said "this is the worst week the millers will have." Between 80 and 90 per cent of the Nation's flour mills will shut down because of lack of wheat to grind into flour.

MURDER

prints were found on the steering wheel and geer shift lever of the car and that they would be carefully compared with those of Glendening on file at headquarters.

Police Overlooked Car

The car was not spotted by police although there is a ban against parking in the block from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and between 4 p. m. and 6 p. m. The car was parked illegally when seen by Nielsen.

Police similarly overlooked an abandoned getaway car used in the holdup of a Kann payroll messenger more than a year ago.

Police have narrowed the time of Glendening's slaying to a 3-hour period from 9:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. Saturday. He talked to Fred Brown, assistant manager of Kitt's Music Store, where he was employed until about a year ago, at 9:30 a. m.

Police further checked into Glendening's background by questioning several of his friends, among them Mrs. Mary Preston, of 56 Seaton pl. nw.

Party Wednesday Night

Mrs. Preston said that a friend of Glendening's had met the young veteran now sought as the slyaer in Franklin Park Tuesday and had taken him to Glendening's apartment.

She said she and her husband, Byron, attended a party Wednesday night. Others there, she said, were Glendening, his friend, and the veteran.

All of them spent the night in Glendening's apartment. Mrs. Preston said she and her husband took over Glendening's bedroom, while Glendening and the veteran slept together in a double day bed. The friend who had brought the veteran to Glendening's apartment slept on a folding cot.

Picnic on Thursday

On Thursday, the Preston's, another couple and Glendening and the veteran drove ot Great Falls, Va., for a picnic.

Mrs. Preston said they returned from Great Falls at about 10 a. m., dropped the second couple near their homes and then proceeded to Glendening's apartment. She said they played some records and then she and her husband left, leaving Glendening and the blond former serviceman.

Mrs. Preson said at about 6:15 p. m. Friday, while riding in a cab to meet her husband, she passed by Glendening's house and observed him sitting in his car at the curb, but added that she hadn't stopped.

Glendening had been known to the Prestons for about eight years. They first met when the Prestons and Glendening lived in an apartment house at 2011 1st st. nw.

Mrs. Preston said Glendening had twice tried to take his life. Police records show he tried suicide by gas last December 20.

Police records also show Glendening had been arrested twice, on February 19, 1944, and April 25, 1944, and booked for investigation on sex charges.

In the first arrest, Lieut. Roy Blick went to 1307 12th st. nw., where Glendening was living at the time, and found him with four Marines.

Blick found a large collection of uniforms, pistols, knives and several Indian war clubs. When Blick confiscated the collection, Glendenin gpleaded with him for return of his war clubs, saying their loss would spoil his collection.

Blick at that time warned him it wasn't safe for a man like Glendening to keep such bludgeons in his apartment.

Gillem said Army strength would be reduced to 4000 "during the last half of 1946."

Matter Of Fact

Bad Staff Work Again

ONE FACT STANDS out like a sore thumb from the bungled labor crisis and the incipient collapse of the price control mechanism. Although the cards were against the President on both the labor and price control issues, he might still have won the game if men close to him had not persistently thrown away his aces and trumps. That is why leading Democrats, hitherto uncritical of their chief, are beginning to mingle real anger with their growing political alarm.

In the labor crisis, the President's chief trump was time, which was thrown away by OWMR Director John Snyder and Mr. John Steelman, who advocated a passive policy until a stage of acute emergency was reached. In the struggle to maintain some semblance of effective price control, the same role has been played by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, who is beginning to be known as "the greatest Secretary of Agriculture since Claude Wickard."

The OPA has its virtues and it defects. But whether it is good or bad on balance, there can be no doubt that extension of OPA was the President's desire. And Anderson, who is a large, genial, prosperous man with excellent intentions, has given powerful encouragement to the anti-OPA forces in Congress. Mainly, he has done so by letting it appear that he hates the whole business just as much as any cotton-State or meat-State Senator or Representative. By the same token, he has a large responsibility for this country's repeated failures to meet famine-relief commitments abroad.

AT THE START, Anderson recommended to Truman the end of rationing, simultaneously assuring Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles that this would neither affect price control nor prevent our meeting food commitments abroad. By derationing meat, he made it inevitable that desperately needed grain would be fed to hogs and cattle. He fought every effective effort to counteract this tendency, and especially the grain set-aside order of May 8, finally issued over his protest. Then, when testifying on Capitol Hill on the OPA, he came out in favor of removing slaughter controls and therefore, by inference, meat price controls.

In the field of grain prices also, he was similarly active. He early advocated a grain price increase, and almost succeeded in securing the President's approval for price relaxation behind the backs of Bowles and Price Administrator Paul Porter. Porter learned what was up by accident, and temporarily put a stop to it. But the substitute Government subsidy and purchase program was so administered by the Department of Agriculture that in the end the price increase had to be granted, entailing other increases on everything from dairy products to fish scraps. Not the least astonishing episode of this controversy was Anderson's own admission, to the OPA people, that he had not realized that grain price rises would bring on a general rise.

In cotton and textiles the story was the same. He is now resisting OPA efforts to divert butterfat from ice cream and candy manufacturers, and desires to raise the price of butter still further. And so it goes. With the President's own Secretary of Agriculture taking this line, it is hardly surprising that the Senate seems likely to transform OPA controls over food and textiles into mere pretenses, and thus to force the President to veto the OPA extension bill.

MEANWHILE, THE story of Snyder's part in the labor crises also becomes more incomprehensible, as more of it becomes known. It was strange enough that in the face of the dangers of the coal and rail strikes, Snyder should have advocated a do-nothing policy on the basis of soothing assurances given to the White House by John L. Lewis. It is downright incredible, but nevertheless true, that he continued to advocate doing nothing very positive at the special Cabinet meeting on the Friday morning before the President's speech to the country.

Even then, with the economy visibly cracking at the seams, he argued that public opinion and other pressures on the labor leaders would solve the whole problem. Nor did the bad staff work at the White House end there. A labor draft limited to a few absolutely essential technicians, which was already an extreme measure, was the personal idea of President Truman. But when the labor draft plan shook the Senate, the President confessed to Senate leaders that he had been "shocked" to find that no kind of limitation on the drafting power had been included in the bill prepared for him by Attorney General Tom Clark.

The President is reported to have been shaken by the experience of the labor crisis. It is not pleasant for a man to find that the advice of those he trusts most has resulted in his being driven into a corner, from which there is no escape except by using any weapon at hand, good or bad, as a cornered man must. It remains to be seen whether he will therefore insist on an improvement of White House staff work. Meanwhile, it can be recorded that such an improvement is considered an urgent necessity by many leaders of the President's own party.

Browbeating Trend of Big Powers

AFTER EVERY major war a tendency on the part of the great powers to disregard the just rights of smaller states makes itself felt. That tendency is growing rapidly today. Unless it is checked, the new international organization, and the international law which must be built up by that organization, cannot prosper.

The way in which the Soviet Union has ignored the sovereignty of the independent peoples of Iran and of Eastern Europe is notorious. It has been piously denounced. But the western democracies. But the western powers have in repeated instances themselves been guilty of precisely the same attitude in their dealings with weaker peoples. The assumption of superior right has been the same. It has differed only in degree.

This basic issue is sharply raised by two very recent examples.

On May 26, the press reported that French troops supported by planes and artillery had invaded Siam and were engaged in heavy fighting with Siamese forces.

It is true that in 1940 when Indo-China was under Japanese domination, the Siamese were encouraged by the Japanese to occupy several strips of Indo-Chinese territory. The Vichy government was compelled to acquiesce. The French government has now demanded restitution and indemnities from Siam. No agreement has, however, been reached. Reports differ as to the immediate causes for this act of aggression. But the recent invasion took place at a point outside the territory in dispute, and Siam has complained to the Security Council.

Whatever the provocation now given to the French authorities in Indo-China by the Siamese, there can be no shadow of justification for the French government to permit its military forces in Indo-China to take the law into their own hands and thus invade the territory of a small nation.

ANOTHER INSTANCE is one for which the United States is itself responsible. In this case, fortunately, the firmness displayed by the small country upon which pressure was being exercised has resulted in a solution which has avoided the infringement of that nation's sovereignty.

For some time past, negotiations have been in progress between the Swiss government and the government of the United States, which has acted as agent for its western Allies, with regard to Nazi assets in Switzerland.

The Allied powers have properly decided that the extent of the German economic war potential represented by German deposits in neutral countries, under cloaked ownership, should be ascertained in order that these assets might be liquidated and the proceeds applied in whole, or in part, to German reparations.

The United States originally demanded of the Swiss government that an Allied commission should be permitted to establish itself in Switzerland, as an autonomous agency, with full power to investigate all financial or commercial institutions in that republic. Such a demand involved a flagrant disregard for the sovereign authority of the Swiss government. Had it been accepted, it would have ignored the responsibility of the representatives of the Swiss people to safeguard their legitimate national rights. It would have opened up every Swiss business to foreign supervision.

In the attempt to force the Swiss government to agree to these demands extreme pressure was exercised by the American officials who took part in the negotiations. These facts have become known to Swiss public opinion. They have created a bitter reaction against the United States on the part of that older and traditionally friendly democracy.

A compromise was finally reached providing that German properties in Switzerland will be liquidated by a Swiss governmental agency, which will accept the corporation in this undertaking of Allied officials. Half of the proceeds of the liquidation will be taken over for Allied reparations. The remainder will go to Switzerland.

Those who loudly complain of the acceptance by the United States of this compromise, and who insist that the entire proceeds should be applied to reparations, conveniently forget that throughout the war Switzerland was forced to maintain a total military mobilization against the ever imminent possibility of German aggression. The burden of this mobilization upon the Swiss people was exceedingly heavy.

THE MAJOR powers have as yet failed adequately to employ the United Nations for the purpose of adjusting their controversies with lesser countries.

No more flagrant error in policy has recently been committed by the United States than when it induced Great Britain and France to join with it in the tripartite proclamation ostensibly designed to overthrow the Franco government. Fortunately, the subsequent demand of Poland that the Security Council consider the problem, notwithstanding the stubborn opposition of the United States, has brought the Spanish question before the only authoritative body which can today represent the community of nations. In this manner the charges against Franco have now been publicly ascertained by the Council. In such a way a final determination as to the course to be pursued with regard to Spain can now be reached through the decision of the United Nations Assembly rather than through the decision of a few or only one of its members.

If the major powers, in their dealings with small countries, continue to pursue a unilateral policy, particularly when such a policy disregards the legitimate rights of the weaker peoples, the sovereignty of the smaller states, notwithstanding the assurances given them by the United Nations Charter, will eventually go by the board. The new world order sought by the United Nations Charter can only be established upon the foundations of an international law which in practice guarantees equality of sovereignty to all the members of the United Nations, small as well as great.

The kind of world order which will make for lasting peace is one in which justice, rather than might, makes right.

European Elections

By Ernest Lindley

Favorable Trend Due To U. S. Stand

DURING THE Paris meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, two prominent French politicians told the American delegates that the strong stand taken by the United States in relation to Russia had definitely affected the referendum on the new French constitution. Some Frenchmen felt assured for the first time that the United States was not going to wash its hands of European affairs and that therefore France had an alternative to doing business with Russia on Russian terms.

Lindley

The results of the French election show that the rejection of the Communist-Socialist constitution was a reliable index of the political trend. The Communists remain a strong minority. But they have ceased to gain. A great majority of the French people reject Communism.

How much the American loan to France may have influenced the election there is no way of knowing. The Communists attacked it as wholly inadequate. But it was further proof that France has a real alternative to leaning on Russia; indeed, that the United States is the only nation which can lend France material assistance in getting on her feet.

THE RESULTS of the Italian election, when finally tabulated, are expected to reveal a trend similar to the French. Italy already has received important material aid from the United States. American and British troops are in Italy—in small numbers but with the evident intention of remaining until a peace treaty is signed. They are keeping Trieste out of the hands of the Yugoslavs and they very clearly look forward to Italy's reentry into the family of nations.

Add the situations in the Lowlands and the Scandinavian countries, and it is evident that western Europe does not want Communism and Russian domination. This is not surprising in countries which have known democracy and have had standards of living far above that which the Russian Communists have been able to give to their own people. The danger of the spread of Communism into western Europe lay in postwar chaos and aloofness by the United States.

Our precipitate demobilization and our delays in extending loans—especially the British loan—have played directly into the hands of the Communists in Europe. So have our strikes. But the damage has not yet been irreparable, because the peoples of western Europe themselves don't want Communism and Russian domination. They need just a little encouragement and economic aid to do what they want to do anyway.

DESPITE THE results of the Czechoslovakian election, there is no reason to think that the peoples of central and eastern Europe want Communism and Russian domination. The heavy Communist vote in Czechoslavakia is generally interpreted rather as resignation to the prospect that Russian influence will be predominant in eastern Europe for a long time to come. It is noteworthy, also, that the Russians have used a relatively light touch in dealing with the Czechs, and that internally the Communists have not yet resorted to terroristic methods. When and if they do, they will surely encounter trouble, for they will be dealing with people as tough as the Poles and the Finns.

In the Middle East and parts of the Far East, where standards of living are lower—even lower than the Russian in many countries—and where the native peoples have seen the imperial rather than the democratic side of western European civilization, the balance of forces may be different.

But in western Europe, the assurance that the United States is not going to throw in the towel, plus judicious economic aid, almost certainly can make the restoration of democracy a downhill fight. The solid reestablishment of democracy in western Europe will inevitably help to keep alive the ideals of democracy in eastern Europe.

These, in brief, are some of the reasons why, as President Truman and Secretary Byrnes believe, time is on our side—or can be made to work on our side.

Children Held Best Judges Of Ideal Father Requisites

"No matter what people say an ideal father should be like, if his own children don't think so, then he just isn't."

That's the way two young girls look at the contest to decide who is Washington's "Ideal Father of 1946." And, of course, they think their father ought to win the contest in a walk.

"My daddy," they assert, "is ideal because we love him and because no other Daddy could be just like he is and because we wouldn't trade him for any other Daddy in the world—not even a very rich one!"

Another girl, 11, says her father should win the contest "because he is a doctor and takes care of people when they need him, no matter what the conditions are . . . When I grow up, I hope to be as helpful to the community as my father is."

The Post is giving all of Washington's youngsters a chance to sound the praises of their "Dad" as Father's Day approaches. Any boy or girl in the Washington area may write to the Ideal Father Editor, The aWshington Post, Washington 4, D. C., and give the reasons why his or her father is "ideal."

The winning dad in the contest and his family will be guests of The Post for a dinner and a show. The youngster who writes the winning letter will be interviewed with his or her father over Station WINX on Father's Day. The "Ideal Father" also will be given a plaque, commemorating the event.

The contest deadline is June 12. All letters, to be judged, must be postmarked no later than June 11. Announcement of the winner will be made June 14.

Bowie Reelects Baumann to Board Of Commissioners

John L. Baumann, president of Bowie's three-man board of commissioners, was reelected to a third one-year term in the town's municipal election.

A total of 255 votes were cast in the election, largest number in the history of the town, according to Baumann.

Other commissioners elected were Aaron A. Horowitz, reelected to an eighth term, and Lawrence R. Maenner, president of the Fourteenth District Democratic Club in Bowie.

Maenner polled 118 votes to defeat Sylvester C. Bell, incumbent, by two votes. Other defeated candidates were William L. Trott, who received 107 votes; James E. Wildman, jr., 47, and Francis O. Boswell, 21.

New York, June 24.—Gen. Mikhail Galaktionov, the Soviet newspaperman now visting here, was taken to the Ringling Bros. circus.

Bebe Daniels

His guide spoke to him in pidgin-French, the only language they both knew . . . "Why don't you learn English?" the guide asked the general, who sighed: "It's the most difficult language in the world. I find it impossible to learn . . . The guide pointed to the performing seals, who were playing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" on a pipe-organ . . . "If they can learn that, General Galaktionov," said the guide, "you can learn English."

Fiorello LaGuardia will continue his broadcasts through the summer months without interruption even by his trip abroad for the UNRRA conferences . . . Ben Lyon and his wife, Bebe Daniels, have relinquished their English domicile. After all these years in show business, they're now the most active couple in the film industry. Miss Daniels is a producer for Hal Roach, and Lyon is the new casting director at Twentieth Century-Fox . . . NYU is so crowded that Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase confessed that he couldn't get the family laundry back until he first assured the laundress that he'd get her son into the school.

Nick the Greek, America's most colorful gambler, still flourishes in Nevada's gambling spots, and this is a story they tell of him: A foreign screen star offered an odd gold coin to the proprietor of the gaming house, who examined it and was unable to identify it. He took it to Nick and said: "Look at this, Nick, and tell me what it is?" . . . Nick held the coin in the palm of his hand, studied it closely and then nodded . . . "Well, what is it?" asked the gaming house proprietor. Nick said: "It's tails."

When Mieczslaw Horozowski appeared as piano soloist with Toscanini's NBC Symphony, announcer Ben Grauer asked the pianist to verify the pronunciation of his first name. Horozowski carefully enunciated: "Mee-hey-che-swaf." . . . When the program was on the air, Grauer introduced the artist several times, each time pronouncing it "Mee-hey-che-swaf . . . One of the musicians later told Grauer: "It should be pronounced 'Mee-hey-che-SLAF,' not SWAF.' I'm Polish, and I know." . . . "I got the pronunciation from Horozowski himself," said the announcer . . . "But didn't you know?" asked the musician, "He lisps."

Ingrid Bergman flew back to Hollywood in Howard Hughes' private plane, with Gary Grant and Alfred Hitchcock . . . Hughes postponed the Constellation's departure four hours, to enable a lady passenger to have her hair done . . . Mike Todd is one of the backers of the East Side club to be opened by Hollywood's Don the Beachcomber . . . Abel Plenn's "Wind in the Olive Trees," which is being introduced as evidence before the United Nations committee investigating Spain, will be the July selection of the Book Find Club. Plenn served in the U. S. Embassy at Madrid . . . The apartment-seeking veterans of Long Island were invited to Michael Straight's Applegreen estate in Westbury for a housing rally by the American Veterans Commission. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and members of the cast of "Call Me Mister" received the veterans and their families.

President Roosevelt saw the Laurence Olivier-Old Vic movie, "Henry V," before he died. Ambassador Halifax arranged for the showing, and both men were enthusiastic about it. "But you and I are university men, Mr. President," said Halifax, "I don't think ours is a typical reaction. The general public is different." . . . "The possession of a university degree doesn't give one an advantage in the appreciation of something good," Roosevelt replied. "I think I know what the general public likes," said the four-times-elected President. "They'll like it."

The youngest first-nighter in Broadway history attended Friday night's premiere of Orson Welles' new musical, "Around the World," the most exciting musical that has come to New York in many years. The first-nighter was Elizabeth Moore, 1 month old. She attended with her mother. Elizabeth's father is Scottie Moore, the parson of "Show Boat" . . . The first-nighters' suspicion that Toots Shor had an interest in the production was confirmed when Lady Mendl had to move from her seat in the second row, and the seat was given to Rags Ragland . . . Lady Mendl, incidentally, who is 89, flew to France later for the summer season.

The interchange of British and American stars in movie-making now is commonplace. But it wasn't, in the days when the late Jackie Osterman was signed by Herb Wilcox to do "Unwanted Men" in London. When Osterman arrived, Wilcox asked him: "Frankly, I don't know what you do. To what British star would you compare yourself?" Jackie replied:: "If I had a haircut and if she's British, I'd say Bea Lillie" . . . Costar Charles Laughton, rehearsing the dying scene in the last reel, asked him: "Did you ever die?" Jackie said: "Yes, once. At the Riverside Theater, at a Monday matinee" For three weeks thereafter nobody paid any heed to Osterman. At the end of the first month of no attention to him, Osterman walked down Piccadilly where a lady of the night asked him: "Whatcha doin' honey?" . . . "I'm doin' a picture for Herbert Wilcox," Osterman shouted. "I'm glad SOMEBODY asked me."

'Blue Dahlia' Proves Chandler's as Good at Scenarios as Novels

THE TENTATIVE ENTHUSIASM expressed here in yesterday's early editions concerning Raymond Chandler's first script written directly for the screen, was verified at yesterday's preview of "The Blue Dahlia."

Alan Ladd

Mr. Chandler should be a valuable addition to the ranks of Hollywood's scenarists. Such of his novels as have been adapted to the cameras have found their way into the top brackets of movie thrillers. "The Blue Dahlia," without benefit of book covers, reveals no tendency to lag behind.

Making the necessary allowances for coincidence, this taut subject runs a murder into a fine volume of excitement, mobster violence and suspense. Precisely how or why, we have no inclination to disclose this far in advance of the picture's public showing.

"This far in advance" isn't so far, at that. The mystery of the death of a Navy fighter pilot's wife, immediately following his return from the South Pacific, will be unveiling itself at Loew's Palace in the wake of "Do You Love Me?" —if the booking sheets stay put.

When it comes along, you will be seeing Alan Ladd in a role poured to his special mold, with Bill Bendix, Veronica Lake and a hand-picked cast adding to the impact of the melodrama by as adroit a lot of restrained performances as Paramount ever packed into a single production.

Some of the names may not be topflight, but the portrayals they contribute in this particular instance are. Howard Da Silva you will hardly recognize as the bartender in "Lost Weekend," all duded up as he is and wearing a mustache. Doris Dowling, you will admit, deserved to be murdered—but not until after she had been given an opportunity to prove it.

"The Blue Dahlia" will even make you forget "This Gun for Hire," the one that gave Mr. Ladd his eminence, and "Murder, My Sweet," the one which, once removed, gave Mr. Chandler his.

Looking backward a mere 24 hours, instead of forward a week or so, a brief recap of the enforced deletions from yesterday's review of "Laffing Room Only" might be all right at this point. June Walker and Gene Wilson, for example, are entitled to note as a pair of specialty dancers who add to the terpsichorean variety of the foolishment. Margot Brander, for her amiable submission to Frank Libuse's outrageous behavior, certainly is due an accolade and an armful of sympathy. And the Ben Yost singers chip in handsomely and score agreeably without the aid of microphones. Joe Young is a glutton for punishment and symbol of burlesque's sadistic hilarity as the evening's whipping boy for Olsen and Johnson. To originate a unique thought, you don't have to be crazy to enjoy Olsen and Johnson, but it's an enormous help!

U. S. Steel seems intent on perpetuating the close alliance between stage and radio set up by the season of "The Theater Guild on the Air" just closed. It will premiere its substitute summer show, "Hour of Mystery," next Sunday night at 9, with Laurence Olivier starring in Eric Ambler's "Journey Into Fear." Mr. Olivier, costar with Ralph Richardson in London's Old Vic Company, now on Broadway, is perhaps the contemporary theater's most notable figure. A ministers' son who early decided on a stage career, Olivier scored first in America in the mystery play, "Murder on the Second Floor," following his appearance in the British production of "Journey's End." He later was seen in Coward's "Private Lives" in both London and New York, and made several pictures while on this side—"Wuthering Heights," "Rebecca," "Pride and Prejudice," "Lady Hamilton." In addition to his service with the Royal Navy's Fleet Air Arm, he found time to produce, direct and star in the film version of "Henry V." one of this season's roadshowed sensations, so far seen in only a few selected first-runs. Many will tell you that Mr. Olivier's is the most distinguished talent in the theater of this generation.

Star in the Making

Those interested in following the careers of potential stage stars from their beginnings would do well to keep an eye on Patricia Bastian.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. F. Bastian, Pat was born in Washington 20 years ago, graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School and has completed her junior year at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., where she is majoring in dramatics.

Having been assigned to the leading role in the first play for which she tried out, in her freshman and sophomore years at Rollins she played the leads in "Queen Victoria," "Cry Havoc," "Kind Lady" and "Brief Music." Her junior year found her in the roles of Christina in Sidney Howard's "The Silver Cord," Elvira in Coward's "Blithe Spirit" and Alice in Kaufman and Hart's "You Can't Take It With You."

The veteran Fred Stone, who directed the last named and appeared in it as Grandpa Vanderhof, selected Pat as his leading lady from among 13 aspirants, and recommended to the dean of dramatics that a play be found especially to afford her opportunity to display the full range of her talents.

Greer Garson and Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo, present during Founders Week to receive honorary degrees from Rollins, offered the same advice and encouragement.

Helen Hayes, Billie Burke and Ina Claire all were born in Washington. Remember?

If you have been wondering what ever happened to Columbia's "Gilda," costarring Rita Hayworth and Glenn Ford in a welter of opulence, it will follow "One More Tomorrow" at the Earle.

Typographical-Error Note

The bottle was labeled "Scotch Liqueur," but I suppose anybody could misspell lacquer!

When sulfathiazole is mixed with dried skimmed milk and soybean flour as a substitute for pollen, beekeepers find it helps prevent the spread of American foulbrood, most disastrous of beehive diseases.

HEDDA HOPPER

Ford's Rolling in High!

Hollywood, Calif., June 4.—Glenn Ford may not get that long vacation he and Eleanor Powell have been planning. Joan Crawford wants him for her leading man. Also I understand Columbia has "The Last Frontier" all ready for him. The Ford stock certainly has soared in the past few months—and I don't mean Henry's . . . "Golden Earrings," which Marlene Dietrich will make at Paramount, was turned down by Merle Oberon. Arthur Rank is paging Merle for an English picture. When Keenan Wynn told me that Marlene is to be his house guest here, I yelled, "so that's the reason you bought her bed." . . . Producer-director Al Lewin is planning a new picture setup with George Sanders. The two did "The Moon and Sixpence" and "Dorian Gray" and now "Bel Ami" together. Lewin, a legitimate Ph D., is one of the smartest men in town on story properties. Instead of paying a fortune for some popular hit, he just digs into the library and comes up with something for a few thousand bucks.

Eleanor Powell

Partners Will Go On

Bob Montgomery and Steve Fisher will continue working together after they finish their present pictures. Steve is writing a play, "Christmas Upstairs," for Bob to do on Broadway next season. It's a psychological story along the lines of "Night Must Fall," the film that opened up a whole new pattern for Bob . . . Bob Hope will be guest of the American Society of Cameramen at their shindig June 7 at the Ambassador. That's by way of forgiving him for kicking them out of the theater during the Look awards broadcast a year ago . . . Erich Remarque arrives here June 24 to pick up some of his paintings at our museum and watch the first day's shooting on "Arch of Triumph" . . . Elyse Knox supports Black Gold—a horse, that is—in Jeffrey Bernard's picture of that title . . . Harry Carey is playing a cattle baron in "Sea of Grass." In real life, he just released 200 steers to relieve the meat shortage in local markets.

Just for a Short Run

I'm surprised that Gregory Peck goes to the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, Mass., to do a play. I thought it would be the Barter Theater in Virginia, where he first started. He takes off as soon as he finishes "The Short Happy Life of Francis MaComber," and will be gone two weeks . . . Eddie Albert laid the groundwork for a picture with Margo in Mexico. I asked about her relatives, whom he met on his recent trip south of the border. He said, "I never met such sweet people—or so many." . . . Roy Del Ruth has signed Ann Harding for the mother role in "It Happened on Fifth Avenue." . . . Desi Arnaz opens his own night club here this winter . . . Dennis O'Keefe plays a serious scientist in "Dishonored Lady." Seems a waste of a good comedian.

This One Is Recommended

"O. S. S." is a thriller done with honesty. Thank heaven, Paramount didn't give it a happy ending. Alan Ladd and Geraldine Fitzgerald made a wonderful team. They should do more films together. New character players also do outstanding jobs. The European scenes are authentic, having been filmed by the Government. While the picture deals with war it doesn't give you that depressed feeling most such films do. You're too interested in learning how Bill Donovan's OSS boys worked in a certain sector . . . Frank Morgan, instead of sailing his boat, Dolphin II, out here from the East Coast, is shipping it by freighter . . . Leslie Howard's daughter, Mrs. Dale Harris of Toronto, Ontario, is to be house guest of the Bill Gargans . . . It's a hurry-hurry job on "Nocturne" so George Raft can get East for the Louis-Conn fight . . . Jack Carson moved out of his comfortable home and into that of his agent . . . Doris Nolan (Mrs. Alexander Knox) returns to the screen soon . . . It's Johnny Weissmuller and Ayleen Gates who are in the swim together. Not long ago it was Brenda Helser . . . Mary Nash signed for a role in Mark Hellinger's next, "A Swell Guy."

Rental Scheme Trial Set June 25

Twenty-two-year-old William F. Nicholson of 2701 6th st. ne., will go to trial June 25 on two charges of giving people keys to nonexisting apartments in exchange for down payments.

He is charged with getting $25 from Lucy Van Huysen of the Belgian Economic Mission May 28 for a key to apartment 14 at 1848 Columbia rd. nw.

Miss Van Huysen, who lives at 1329 Emerson st. nw., found no apartment 14.

He is also charged with getting $20 from Lieut. Gerald Greene of 2134 G st. nw., for a key to an apartment at 1864 Columbia rd. nw. Lieut. Greene found the premises occupied by a Safeway Store.

U. S. Plans Organized Fight To Halt Juvenile Crime Wave

Attorney Genereal Tom Clark said yesterday the Government is mobilizing public and private forces to "forestall the greatest juvenile crime wave in the nation's history."

A national conference, sponsored by the ederal Government, will be held here in September to review the whole teen-age crime problem, prepare to combat it and recommend any necessary legislation.

"Representatives of 12 Federeal agencies, including the Federal Security Agency and the FBI, of State and municipal governments, the bench and bar, educational and religious authorities and leaders in child welfare fields will participate," Clark said in an intereview.

Clark stressed that "positive action is essential." It is appalling, for example, that sex delinquenecy among 17-year-old girls increased 365 per cent in 1945. And 21 per cent of all crimes now are committed by youths.'"

He said the conference will:

1. Prepare plans for juvenile correctional institutions "which wil lhave neither the appearance nor the atmosphere of prisons or reformatories."
2. Consider minimum qualifications for probation and parole officers.
3. Study the possible improvement of juvenile detention facilities.
4. Prepare recommendations for improving police training.
5. Chart the setting up of community recreation facilities for youths.
6. Submit recommendations for construction of schools and playgrounds in Federal, State and local building programs.
7. Chart the organization of community councils to coordinate local antijuvenile delinquency programs.
8. Recommend legislation dealing with youth crimes.

Court Upholds Cemetery Lot Fraud Verdict

The conviction of Richard W. Deaver on a charge of using the mails to defraud in selling cemetery lots near Laurel, Md., was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

The decision explained that Deaver's National Capital Co. brought in some $1,500,000 from 1934 to 1940 when it went into receivership.

The company's scheme was to convince people to turn in their depreciated stocks for cemetery lots which could be resold later at a profit, the decision stated.

The defense claimed that the misrepresentations described were no more than "seller's talk and puffing," according to the opinion, written by Justice Bennett Champ Clark.

Deaver, whose home is in Dayton, Ohio, is under a sentence of from 8 to 24 months on his earlier District Court conviction.

Polih Official Denies His Country Turns Red; Pleads for U. S. to Understand Its Problems

(Fourth of five uncensored articles by a Post reporter who has just returned from Warsaw.)

By Michael Frome
Post Reporter

A Polish cabinet minister, who returned to Warsaw after serving in the London government-in-exile for five years, pleaded with Americans to understand the problems his nation faces and to aid in its reconstruction.

Jan Stanczyk (Stinechick), Socialist Minister of Labor and Public Welfare, told this reporter in Warsaw last week that "the United States must remember that we are still not in a normal situation and cannot fupction as a nation that was not ravaged by the war."

Stanczyk, considered a follower of the middle road between the left-wing government "bloc" and the moderate Polish Peasant Party of Stanislaus Mikolajcyk, also urged that UNRRA speed the repatriation of half a million Poles now in displaced persons camps in Germany.

The minister, who before the war was head of the powerful Polish Miners Union, joined the Warsaw government after the Yalta meeting and insisted that the governmental base be broadened as a requisite of American and British recognition.

The minister welcomed me with the warmest possible greeting, recalling that he had only recently attended the UNRRA conference at Atlantic City, where he had been a constant reader of my paper.

"In America I saw apprehension that this will be a Communist country," he said. "This is not true. We are determined to maintain good relations with our neighbor, Soviet Russia, and this policy is dictated by our own interests. But, at the same time, we are striving for good economic and political relations with the western powers.

"We are very worried about the disputes between Russia, America and Great Britain. We know that as long as these three powers work together in harmony we can hope for peace—and there is probably no nation in need of peace as much as Poland. Only in an atmosphere of peace can we rebuild and assure our people of a better future.

Must Avoid Strife

"America keeps asking why the elections have been postponed. It must be understood that a nation so completely destroyed, in which the people lived in terror and hunger, is mentally sick, very inclined to incitement. In this condition, we must avoid political strife, which might lead to open fighting among the various factions.

"We must work in unity and direct the entire attention of the people to the first and foremost task—rebuilding the nation. Amid ruins the question of democracy or dictatorship is meaningless.

"In addition we must contend with the large Russian occupation armies in Germany and Austria continually moving back and forth across our borders. It is a great disturbance for us but an unavoidable one; and it lies in our interest that Germany and Austria be occupied as long as possible.

"Any internal strife in Poland would create the danger of Russia having to bring order so as to protect the channels of communication with its occupation forces.

Not Normal Situation

"The United States must remember that we are still not in a normal situation and we cannot handle our problems as they would be handled in a nation not ravaged by war.

"Yet I still hope that, in spite of our hardships, we will be able to develop as a free people and an independent nation in the brotherhood of nations, with whom we fought for a common cause and suffered so much.

"We know that we must act as a responsible people and a responsible government. All who wish us a happier future must understand and help us out of the difficult times we have inherited from the war."

Although he spoke quite eloquently, the minister occasionally interrupted his discussion to remind me that "I do not speak English too good. The first time I spoke it was when I went to London with the government. You will please make it sound correct?"

Poles Lack Manpower

One of Poland's greatest postwar handicaps, he declared, is a lack of manpower. The country lost about six million of its citizens, the majority men of working age. Among its survivors are a million or more in poor physical condition and unable to work. The Germans either murdered the skilled workers or treated them so brutally in forced labor that survival was impossible.

"We still have about a half a million persons, mostly men, in occupied Germany," he said. "When the government was established here, Poles were eager and enthusiastic to return and help rebuild the country. About 300,000 came back, many on foot and without organization.

"The Polish situation in Germany today is cause for grave concern. After being fed, clothed and sheltered in idleness, our people have grown demoralized. Knowing how bad conditions are in Poland they are rather inclined to stay where they are and continue to be cared for by the British and Americans.

"I am afraid that if they stay there much longer they will soon be totally unfit for work, either here or abroad. As you have seen, people in Poland, especially the workers and technicians, are in good spirits. They are not demoralized, but rather work with faith and enthusiasm to restore their industry.

Wants Them Home

"It is extremely urgent that UNRRA and SHAEF speed the repatriation of these people for the good of Poland and in order to achieve a stable condition on the European continent. Far more would be accomplished if UNRRA resettled them in Poland and gave them the same aid here, instead of in Germany, where they are doing nothing."

There was a knock on the door and my interpreter entered. "Excuse me, Mr. Minister, but the gentleman is already overdue for his next appointment."

Stanczyk rose from the chair behind his desk. He was no taller than 5 feet 2 inches. "And you go call the next appointment and say the gentleman will be 20 minutes late!" he exclaimed.

Though he was small in height, the minister was stockily built. He looked and spoke like the typical Polish-American coal miner of Pennsylvania, with pride in both his nationality and his trade.

"The lack of sufficient food for workers," he continued, "is a serious stumbling block in the path of industrial recovery.

"When I returned here after five years in the exile government I was amazed to see how the hungry, exhausted people had already begun to work in the textile mills of Lodz and the mines and steel mills of Upper Silesia.

Not Enough Yet

"Although we have introduced progressive legislation—social insurance, pay for holidays and shorter working hours—it is not enough. When the workers have no food, clothing, or homes in which to live, they make their demands for those important items. Unfortunately, we are unable to fulfill our obligations because we have neither food nor material for the workers and their families. Exhausted and desperate after seven long years of hardship, the workers are often calling spontaneous and sporadic strikes.

"I go to them as a minister and a trade unionist and tell them we have no food; that they must work; if they do not, the situation will be worse tomorrow. It is an unfortunate situation and we are doing our best to overcome it.

"The solution lies in help from abroad in the shape of machinery. The people of Warsaw are clearing away the debris with their bare hands and primitive tools. If we could get bulldozers to supplement the energy of the people we could get the debris out of the way and proceed to the next task.

Poland Needs Help

"Poland cannot develop its productivity without the support of those nations lucky enough not to have suffered mass murder by the Germans. If we do not get this support the nation will face a long period of hardship; perhaps we will have to pay with the death of our adult population and the growth of our children into tuberculars.

"But if we could get tools into the hands of our determined people, reconstruction would be a normal process and we would be able to take part in economic exchange with other nations.

"As things stand now, we are making mistakes—serious blunders. But mistakes are unavoidable in the creation of a new state with an inexperienced administration. In spite of it all, we are making progress and will continue to. In spite of the fury of some of the people, once conditions are explained they understand and work harder than ever."

Latest Ideal Father Nominee Has Sure Backing of 15 Votes

"I think my father is the ideal father because he had to pace the floor 15 times—9 boys and 6 girls," a little girl wrote The Post yesterday.

She was nominating her dad for the "Ideal Washington Father of 1946," a contest sponsored by The Post.

"He came to the hospital when I was there with rheumatic fever—snow up to his knees—just to bring me a radio so I would not be lonesome. Don't you think he is an ideal father?" she asked in her letter.

The Post is giving her and other youngsters in Washington a chance to put Dad right in the front on "his day." Any boy or girl in the Washington area can enter the contest.

Letters should be addressed to the Ideal Father Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, 4, D. C. They should give the reason why the youngster considers his or her father to be "ideal."

The winning dad in the contest and his family will be guests of The Post for dinner and a show. The boy or girl who writes the winning letter will be interviewed with his or her father over Station WINX on Father's Day. The "Ideal Father" will also be given a plaque commemorating the event.

The contest deadline is June 12. All letters, to be judged, must be postmarked no later than June 11. Announcement of the winner will be made June 14.

Smoot Strike Talks Fail to Reach Truce

Union and management representatives of the strikebound Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. met with Government conciliators yesterday in an effort to end the 29-day walkout, but failed to reach an agreement.

A spokesman for the firm, which supplies a large part of the city's sand and gravel, said the meeting failed to bring the disputants any closer to a settlement.

Counter-Inflation Bond Drive Opens Here on Thursday

A Nation-wide campaign to combat inflation through the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds will begin here Thursday, second anniversary of the D-Day landings in France.

The campaign, first peacetime drive for the sale of bonds similar to those which financed America's war efforts, was announced locally by Wilmer J. Waller, chairman of the District Savings Bonds Division. It will be a publicity drive, conducted without quotas or solicitations, and will close on the Fourth of July.

"Our country's need for our savings is as urgent today as during the war," Waller declared. "Savings Bonds represent money wisely diverted from the markets, where needless buying tends to push up the cost of living prices.

"Our Savings Bonds' dollar continues to help out the veterans. The men still in hospitals continue to look to us for their recovery and readjustment to civilian life. And Savings Bonds are the finest investment we can make, paying back $4 for every $3 when held to maturity."

Treasury analysts estimate Americans will have about twenty-two billion dollars more in 1946 income than they can spend on consumer goods at legitimate prices, Waller said.

Miss Truman Goes Incognito to Voice Test

An attractive blonde girl walked into a well-known singing teacher's New York studio last October 27 and asked for a voice test. She said her name was Miss Wallace.

The teacher was busy, and Miss Wallace waited patiently for several hours. Finally, she was admitted, sang a few songs, and was told she had a "lovely voice," much talent and musicianship. On her way out, the flushed girl dropped her scores and the singing teacher noticed they were marked "Margaret Truman." The President's daughter, on an incognito trip, had assumed her mother's family name to get a candid professional opinion on whether she could sing.

Socialist Seen As Head of New French Regime

Paris, June 4 (AP).—France's three major political parties maintained silence tonight on the question of who will head the new government, but impartial observers believed a Socialist would be chosen.

There appeared little likelihood that the victorious Popular Republican Movement Party (MRP), which emerged from Sunday's election as France's strongest, would insist upon the presidency for Foreign Minister Georges Bidault.

Neither the MRP, the Socialists nor the Communists have come out affirmatively with a claim for the presidency of the provisional government, which will rule France until a constitution has been accepted by the people.

Assembly to Meet

The Assembly will meet Tuesday, and on the following day is expected to elect its own officers before settling down to choice of a president, who will be elected by a simple majority vote of the assembly.

Socialist Felix Gouin, president of the retiring government; Vincent Auriol, Socialist president of the old constituent assembly, and prewar Socialist Premier Leon Blum, the party's leader, were regarded as likely candidates.

The Socialists, attempting to strengthen a position badly weakened by Sunday's election, have raised speculation over the possibility of a Socialist-Communist-Radical Socialist government. However, former Premier Edouard Daladier said his rightest Radical Socialist Party would not participate in the new government.

Communits Obstacle

Any government which does not include the Communist will be a difficult one to form and keep in existence. The Communists are now France's second largest party. Most observers believed the Communists never would enter a government headed by the MRP, which they view as reactionary and Catholic-dominated.

At the saem time the Socialists have emphasized repeatedly they would refuse to participate in any government which excluded the Communists, just as, previously, they had refused to consider participation in one which excluded the MRP. The only solution still seemed to be a three-party coalition headed by the Socialists.

The Communist newspaper L'Humanite said today the Communist aPrty had won a victory in Sunday's election over an anti-Communist campaign by increasing its popular vote eyen though it lost out as France's largest single party.

The first complete performance in Washington! "Turandot" is the last opera by the composer of Madame Butterfly, Tosca and La Boheme—a work which he had not quite completed at the time of his death and which was finished by his friend and pupil, Franco Alfano. The story is of a Chinese Princess and the long succession of suitors who attempted, unsuccessfully, to answer her three riddles. Failing in their attempts, they were put to death. But the Unknown Prince, whose identity becomes known only toward the end, succeeds. And the opera ends in a joyous scene of immense power. Tonight's cast includes Gina Cigna, Magda Olivero, Francesco Merli and Luciano Neroni—the orchestra and large chorus are directed by Franco Ghione. Here is one of the great works of our time, in a perfect recorded performance—another WINX first!

Filipino Naturalization

In 1943 Congress altered our Oriental exclusion policy to permit Chinese to enter the United States on the same basis as other nationalities for the purpose of becoming citizens. A quota of 105 per year was set by the Department of Justice. No flooding the country with cheap labor or other dire result ensued. If anything, our prestige was enhanced at a critical time in the Orient, where "face" means so much, by removal of the bar to immigration on a purely racial basis and the recognition of the Chinese as equals. Now Congress has the opportunity to do the same for the Filipinos. HR 776, authorizing the naturalization of Filipinos already in this country and permitting immigration, has passed the House and is now before the Senate Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. Once the bill becomes law, any desired quota can be established on the number of Filipinos who actually emigrate to this country.

It is particularly important that the Senate enact HR 776 before adjournment. On July 4 the Philippines will become an independent nation. The American guardianship of the Philippines is generally recognized as a model in preparing colonial areas for self-government. It would be appropriate, and at the same time would augur well for future relations, to give Philippine independence a final needed implementation in this legal recognition of the fact that we now consider the Filipinos a fully equal and sovereign people.

The Filipinos deserve this recognition if any people ever did. Their war record was one of wholehearted loyalty and cooperation with the United States. Many Filipinos served courageously in our armed forces. Aside from these considerations, there is the problem of some 84,000 Filipinos now living in the United States and its Territories. Although as yet ineligible to become American citizens, these Filipinos have been classed as American nationals. Many of them have lived in this country for long periods. If the Senate should fail to pass HR 776 in time, they would be reduced to the status of outright aliens, with undetermined effect on the rights and privileges they have enjoyed. This is an injustice which is entirely preventable and should not be allowed to happen.

By removing the ban on naturalization of Filipinos, Congress will be taking a wise step in reorienting our immigration policy on a sound basis consistent with our democratic way of life. We have just fought a war one of whose principles was to establish the equality of all peoples regardless of race or color. It is only logical that our immigration laws should reflect a principle for which we fought.

Petrillo's Fortitude

Whatever else may be said of Mr. James Caesar Petrillo, one cannot but admire his fortitude. As president of the American Federation of Musicians, Mr. Petrillo last week intentionally violated the new Lea Act which was aimed specifically at curbing the musicians' union. Now he has gone one step further. If, as a result of the test to which he has put the law, the Supreme Court does not find it unconstitutional, Mr. Petrillo has threatened to cripple radio networks by refusing to renew contracts in cities where network programs originate, thus preventing networks from broadcasting musical programs. He also has threatened to prohibit musicians from making any recordings if the law is sustained. And, under the iron grip with which he holds professional music, Mr. Petrillo is just the man to make good his boasts.

Mr. Petrillo's strategy is plain. He is on a one-man campaign to eliminate the Lea Act, and he is playing two horses. If the Supreme Court should hold the law valid, he intends to force the radio networks and record concerns to bring pressure on Congress for outright repeal of the act. The odds are that one way or the other he will win his point, and rightly so. The Lea Act was bad legislation which never should have been passed in the first place. It is better to have no law at all than to have a crudely discriminatory measure which is the product of haste and spite.

But Mr. Petrillo will be making a mistake if he believes that, once the Lea Act is out of the way, he will have a clear path for whatever new bludgeons he cares to bring forth. Public reaction to the insolence, intimidation, autocracy and uneconomic philosophy characterizing the operations of Mr. Petrillo and other leaders whose power has distorted their perspective will continue to grow until there is really constructive, broad labor legislation on the books applicable to all unions. In this sense, Mr. Petrillo, by the very annoyance he creates, is performing a valuable service in needling the public and Congress. He is the symbol of a major ill which needs to be healed. Legislation that will help smooth out our ruffled labor relations is not something for ill-considered enactment in anger. Instead, as President Truman has indicated, it is a project for long-term study of top priority. Along with union privilege must come a clear definition of union responsibility to the public and of what constitutes legitimate union practice. Until unions assume their proper place in our economic system by law, that system will continue to suffer the disruptions of the new Petrillos that arise to plague it.

Another Assignment

As the editor and publisher of this newspaper prepares to take up his new post as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, he finds the following quotation from the speech of Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson, delivered in Boston last night, singularly apt in speaking his own thoughts and feelings:

". . . It seems to me the path of hope is toward the concrete, toward the manageable, in the first instance. A forum there should be, and there is, for the adjustment, as best we can, of those critical issues which threaten the peace. But, when we come to tasks of common management, it seems wise to start with those which through hard and intelligent work can be reduced to manageable dimensions and governed by pretty specific rules and standards—like the Monetary Fund, the Bank, the trade organization, and, if possible, the control of atomic energy. These are hard enough in all conscience. I have chewed on them and know their toughness and the frailty of the task forces and their plans. But the jobs are doable with good sense and good luck.

"To do these jobs and conduct our own affairs with passable restraint and judgment—the type of judgment, as Justice Brandeis used to say, which leads a man not to stand in front of a locomotive—will be an achievement. Moreover, it will be an achievement which will profoundly modify many situations which now concern us, including—and I am now guessing—our relations with the Soviet Union. Problems which are difficult against a background of confusion, hesitation and disintegration may well become quite possible of solution as national and international institutions and activities become healthy and confident and vigorous in a large part of the world. Certainly our troubles will not increase.

"But it is a long and tough job and one for which we as a people are not particularly suited. We believe that any problem can be solved with a little ingenuity and without inconvenience to the folks at large. We have trouble shooters to do this. And our name for problems is significant. We call them headaches. You take a powder and they are gone. These pains about which we have been talking are not like that. They are like the pain of earning a living. They will stay with us until death. We have got to understand that all our lives the danger, the uncertainty, the need for alertness, for effort, for discipline will be upon us. This is new to us. It will be hard for us. But we are in for it and the only real question is whether we shall know it soon enough."

Bill of Attainder

In its decision in the Watson-Dodd-Lovett cases, the Supreme Court has reasserted a constitutional doctrine vital to the protection of individual liberty. It has held invalid an act of Congress which, three years ago, proscribed these men by name from future paid employment by the Government of the United States. A little more than three years ago, on May 13, 1943, when the proscription of two of these men was proposed in the House of Representatives, The Post declared in an editorial: "If Congress follows such a course, it will be guilty at once of legislation in the nature of a bill of attainder and of a gross usurpation of executive authority."

The House chose to follow this course. By a vote of 318 to 62, it attached to the Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act of 1943 a rider providing that "No part of any appropriation . . . to any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States, shall be used, after November 15, 1943, to pay any part of the salary, or other compensation for the personal services, of Goodwin B. Watson, William E. Dodd, jr., and Robert Morss Lovett. . . ." The Senate, after rejecting this rider by a vote of 69-0, at last reluctantly acceded to it. And the President, rather than arrest the appropriation of funds urgently needed for prosecution of the war, signed it with an assertion that he considered it unconstitutional.

The three men were retained in their offices for a sufficient period after November 15, 1943, to enable them to test this act by a suit in the Court of Claims for recovery of salaries due them. The Court of Claims upheld their right to recovery. And the Supreme Court has now affirmed the Court of Claims judgment. Five members of the Supreme Court, speaking through Mr. Justice Black, unequivocally found the congressional act to be a bill of attainder and therefore unconstitutional. Mr. Justice Frankfurter, supported by Mr. Justice Reed, concurred in the view that the respondents are entitled to recover the judgment they obtained from the Court of Claims, but did not agree that the House rider ought to be construed as a bill of attainder.

The scrupulous regard for prerogatives of the legislature expressed by Mr. Justice Frankfurter seems to us proper and respectable. He has been a consistent adherent of his own doctrine enunciated in this case, that "when congressional legislation is under scrutiny, every rational trail must be pursued to prevent collision between Congress and Court." But it seems to us that there is a leaning over backward in his argument that because it did not expressly contain a judgment of condemnation, "at the least, there are such serious objections to finding section 304 (the House rider) a bill of attainder that it can be declared unconstitutional only by a failure to observe that this Court reaches constitutional invalidation only through inescapable necessity."

It seems to us that section 304, as Mr. Justice Black put it, "clearly accomplishes the punishment of named individuals without a judicial trial." Consequently, the recognition of it as a bill of attainder seems to us a genuinely "inescapable necessity." The respect of the Court for legislative authority should not, in any case, transcend or obscure its zeal for the protection of individual liberty. For it is to the Court alone that individuals can turn for the defense of rights infringed by legislative acts. "When our Constitution and Bill of Rights were written," observed Mr. Justice Black, "our ancestors had ample reason to know that legislative trials and punishments were too dangerous to liberty to exist in the nation of free men they envisioned." They are no less dangerous now. And invalidation of them is a positive duty of the Court in the fulfillment of its function as the shield of our freedom.

France's Election

The entire democratic world can breathe a sigh of relief over the outcome of last Sunday's elections in France. At a time when all Europe has become the battleground of conflicting ideologies, a victory for the Communists would have had far-reaching and, possibly, very dangerous repercussions. First of all, it would have meant the repudiation of the spirit of liberty in the land that has been its classic home. Secondly, it would have meant the establishment of a Russian political base at the western extremity of the Continent. For a Communist victory would have brought France completely within the Soviet orbit, since the basic policy of the Communists in France, as elsewhere, is to support Russian policy and Russian aims. Thirdly, there can be no doubt but that a Communist victory in France would have disheartened the democratic forces in Europe, particularly in the Russian-dominated zone, where they have been making a valiant fight for survival against very great odds.

These possibilities may have been very much in the minds of the French voters when they went to the polls last Sunday. Indeed, the campaign was very largely fought on the basis of communism versus anticommunism, even the Socialists turning on their rivals of the extreme Left. The outcome is clear. The Communists succeeded in just about holding their own, despite the vigorous campaign they waged, the great get-out-the-vote effort made by their well-organized and ably led forces and the direct and indirect support they received from Russia. Although their strength in the new Constituent Assembly will be six less than in the last Assembly, they polled around 140,000 votes more than they received last October. But the greatest gainers in the election were the members of the Popular Republican Movement, the MRP, which stands for far-reaching social and economic reforms within the framework of a free, nontotalitarian state.

This party has emerged as the first party in France and will thus dominate the three-party coalition which has been in power since France's liberation. In this particular, the French election outwardly changes matters very little, since there is every reason to believe that the basis of government in France in the immediate future as in the recent past will have to be the same three-power coalition of MRP, Communists and Socialists. The election may not even result in the displacement of the present head of state, Felix Gouin, since the Communists may object to a Popular Republican President. Nonetheless, in bringing the MRP to the fore, in reflecting a decline, slight as it was, in Communist strength, and in revealing the overwhelming majority of voters as wedded to ideals of liberty, the election was a landmark in Europe's postwar history.

Enlightened Policy

Consideration for the general public on the part of union leaders recently has appeared about as rare as the proverbial snowball in Hades. Thus the action of Washington AFL bakers in postponing a strike despite a vote authorizing it comes as a welcome surprise. Particularly to the point were the words of Charles B. McClosky, business agent of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers. "The public is having enough done to them right now by other people without the bakers making the situation worse," he said. "We'll see how it (the end of the rail strike) affects flour deliveries and whether the Government is really going to do anything about the flour shortage. The public is suffering enough; we don't want to beat them over the head."

Regardless of the merits in this particular dispute, and regardless of whether a strike eventually materializes, the bakers deserve credit for their forbearance in this time of crisis. The public has been beaten over the head enough. This recognition of the vital public concern in employe-management controversies sets a pattern sorely needed for restoring balance in our tangled labor relations. An ounce of self-discipline is worth a ton of discipline; indeed, it is only self-restraint that makes our democratic society function at all.

"Doolittle Report"

Marshall Andrews' objections to the Doolittle recommendations in his story of June 2 are the pat answers of our standard Blimps.

Football quarterbacks manage to obtain instant obedience to orders without being saluted off the campus, without living in separate houses, without eating steaks while the linemen eat hash. Factory foremen can go fishing with their helpers without affecting shop efficiency. Policemen are obeyed not because they live in swank apartments, but simply because they represent constituted authority, exactly as do military officers.

Doesn't Andrews fear a wholesale breakdown of the entire Army because captains will grow contemptuous of colonels whom they see drunk at the club, because majors will fight generals over the affections of nurses, because lieutenants will engage in a free-for-all in a bar? Or is he able to think beyond the stupid tradition of landed gentry superiority which we've adopted from the Prussians?

LIEUT. ARNOLD COURT.
Washington.

No nicer example of what The Post has been fighting editorially (God bless it!) could be furnished than by this primitive defense of all that the Doolittle Report attacks. If it were the subtle intention of the papere to display by headline and by-line what it loathes, I must applaud. Doubting such subtlety, I add my voice to the many who must have been offended.

Serious issues deserve serious consideration.

ELIZABETH H. BOWIE.
Arlington, Va.

Today the men who make up the "enlisted" and "officer" groups come from the same classes in society, where privileges and responsibility are equal and where orders are given and carried out. But in the Army they are subjected to an archaic system which is the relic of a time when social classes existed in civil life and were automatically extended to Army organization.

No one wants to turn the Army into a debating society. We want an abolition of unwarranted privilege so that our Army may be a worthy organ of American democracy.

DAVID R. FUSFELD.
Washington.

Can anyone who has tried to associate fully with a real friend or close relative in the other half of the Army deny that he is not constantly embarrassed and obstructed, and sometimes even prevented, from enjoying a normal relationship? And isn't it perfectly clear that the "customs and traditions" standing in the way are quite unlike the mores of general society—for they can be countermanded out of the existence by military orders?

Andrews' fears of "officer-man fights" are childish. He implies that the Doolittle plan of "general leveling" would permit an officer to strike an enlisted man. How puerile! Do differences in rank encourage fights between officers now? Or between enlisted men? Scarcely. Does a man become a master sergeant now because he can lick every man under him? How absurd!

Price Of Bread

As we are going to pay the same price for a loaf of bread that is nine tenths of its former size, why should not the profit resulting from the one tenth cut go into a fund for the starving people to Europe instead of to the bakers who will still be making their usual profit.

Dollar Haircuts

If butter were a dollar a pound, streetcar fares 20 cents and cigarettes 25 cents per pack, I could understand dollar haircuts. I make a motion that we Washingtonians set aside June, 1946, as "Don't get a haircut month." Do I hear a second? SHAGGY.

"Mikhailovich Trial"

With reference to your editorial of June 2 on Draja Mikhailovich, may I call to your attention the following pertinent facts:

1. Mikhailovich is being tried for treasonable activities against the people and the government of Yugoslavia.

2. The present Yugoslavia state was created by the Yugoslavia National Liberation Front, which conquered the forces that fought for the restoration of the old regime and for the establishment of Serbian hegemony and Chetnik dictatorship in Yugoslavia.

3. Mikhailovich was the leader of the political and military opposition to the National Liberation Front. Neither he nor any of his followers has ever denied that Mikhailovich and his Chetniks engaged in a life and death struggle against the National Liberation Front and that they are responsible for thousands of lost Partisan lives.

4. Even after the present Yugoslavia regime became firmly established and was recognized by the United Nations as the legal representative of the peoples of Yugoslavia, Mikhailovich refused to recognize the legality of the government and continued to struggle against it.

5. Mikhailovich's followers in the United States are even today advocating and collecting money for a revolutionary overthrow of the present Yugoslav regime.

Regardless, therefore, of the extent of Mikhailovich's collaboration with the enemy or of the number of American aviators saved by the Chetniks, there can be no doubt about Mikhailovich's guilt. He is guilty of treason against the present Yugoslav state. We may sympathize with Mikhailovich and favor his political philosophy. But we cannot deny that the sovereign state of Yugoslavia has the right to try and punish its own citizens for carrying on subversive activities against the state.

"National Health Insurance"

It was with a reaction of intense surprise that I read the sincere and constructively intended letter of Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly in the issue of May 25. In discussing the Wagner-Murray-Dingell national health bill, Dr. Mattingly made the statement that the legislation contains elements of racial discrimination and that "the Negro patient and the Negro doctor are not guaranteed equality of insurance protection." The doctor is persuaded that the bill provides racial and geographical restrictions on the potential benefits.

While I sympathize deeply with Dr. Mattingly's concern for racial equality in our country, I am convinced that he is in complete error in ascribing discriminatory provisions to the national health bill. Careful study of all parts of the legislation has failed to reveal to me a single instance of such undemocratic restriction. On the contrary, the bill is designed to assure—almost for the first time—a complete equality of opportunity in the attainment of all needed medical care.

This is accomplished in a fundamental way in the health insurance bill by breaking down the foremost barrier to adequate medical care—namely, the high cost of modern medical services—through the medium of small prepayments scaled to income. Every working man and woman in the country and their dependents, including beneficiaries of old age insurance, would be included in the program and would be afforded ready access to complete medical care from doctors, dentists and hospitals of their own choosing.

Any physician legally qualified to practice medicine in any State is free to participate in the program if he so chooses. Doctors would retain the right to accept or reject any patient. Payments for services rendered—the method to be chosen by the doctors themselves—would be guaranteed the practitioner from the National Health Fund.

As a matter of fact, the bill specifically omits any reference to membership in local AMA medical societies as requisites for participation in the program, thereby assuring freedom of choice to Negro doctors who are barred from certain organizations.

Section 122 (a) of the maternal and child health part of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill states that the State plan must be "available to all mothers and children in the State or locality." A similar provision is found in the section on medical care for needy persons, with a specific ban on the imposition of any residency requirements. The health insurance title of the bill constantly stresses universal eligibility of patients and the option of participation for any licensed doctor.

Truly, it is difficult to understand Dr. Mattingly's implication that "a Negro doctor delivering a Negro mother . . ." would not be remunerated for that professional service from the National Health Fund. Of course he would, and this ready access to needed medical care is the fundamental reason why citizens of every section of the country stand to benefit immeasurably from the provisions of the health bill.

Washington Calling

Alaskan Bases

IN THE LATEST blast from Moscow, American imperialism is the charge hurled by Russia in connection with the American interest in bases. This charge echoed loudly over the proposal to keep a United States base in Iceland. It was picked up in this country by champions of Russia.

Here is an important fact which certainly modifies that charge. It is a fact which was concealed by wartime secrecy.

At only one point are the borders of the Soviet Union and the United States in close proximity. Across the Bering Strait, the western tip of Alaska is separated from the eastern tip of Siberia by only 54 miles. In western Alaska, there are not only no bases but no defenses of any consequence.

The story of our defense system in Alaska, our farthest frontier, is a curious one. The Army and Navy together have poured more than a billion dollars into Alaska. A great chain of bases has been built in southern Alaska and the Aleutians. With one or two minor exceptions, these bases are hundreds of miles—in the worst flying weather in the world—from the nearest border of our wartime ally, Russia.

One of the minor exceptions is Kuskokwim, a base built at the head of Kuskokwim Bay, which is about 300 air miles north of the Aleutians. Kuskokwim is now being decommissioned, as is another base on the west coast, Naknek.

The major bases were all aimed at Japan. They are far out in the Aleutian chain. Perhaps the largest is at Adak. One almost entirely unknown to the public is on the tiny island of Shemya. It was selected because it is almost the only island in the chain with sufficient flat surface to provide a landing field for heavy bombers.

ALTHOUGH IT was hidden by top-secret restrictions, a start was made on a base on the Seward Peninsula, which is nearest the great Asiatic land mass. At great cost, materials were hauled to Port Clarence, north of Nome. They were to go into a base back of Port Clarence at Point Spencer.

Those materials have now been declared surplus. The plans for the base have been abandoned. Some of our Alaskan defense advisers believe this is a mistake. They argue that, with millions still being spent on defensive bases in the South Pacific, a little could be spared for a purely defensive base on the westernmost tip of Alaska.

The whole of northwest Alaska is without any real defense system. One may ask what it matters—just a lot of frozen, empty country? One answer is that the Navy is preparing to develop what appear to be extensive oil deposits in northern Alaska. Another and far more important answer is that Alaska would give an enemy easy bombing range of United States industrial centers.

ALL THROUGH the war Alaska was a major ferry point for lend-lease planes going to Russia. American pilots were not allowed to deliver those planes on Russian soil. Instead, Russian pilots were flown to Fairbanks, 500 miles in the interior. Wartime Fairbanks was an extraordinary spectacle, with Russians constantly going and coming. Yet in two or three instances when top-flight Americans wanted to fly into Russia by the back door it took all sorts of negotiations. Special restrictions were applied on these flights. One visitor who went in that way was Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace. Wendell Willkie, at the conclusion of his "one world" journey, flew out by the back door to Alaska.

Planning and construction of the base at Point Spencer was a top secret in its beginning phase. But Soviet flyers flew back and forth across that area almost at will.

About what is happening in the eastern tip of Siberia we know nothing or next to nothing. It is a certainty, however, that the Soviets, with their far-reaching intelligence system, know the exact status of our Alaskan defense. What is printed here will not be news in Moscow.

If the United States had imperialistic aims that in any way involved Soviet Russia then the first place to establish bases would be where the two borders are only 54 miles apart. This country has shown no intention of fortifying our side of that border. What Russia is doing on the other side is only one small part of the great unknown.

Fairness to Pepper

I quote from the Congressional Record of May 24:

Mr. Murray: "I yield for a question."

Mr. Pepper: "I will ask the able Senator if it is not correct that proposed amendments to the social security law contemplate insurance benefits or payments to individuals who might sustain disability through some permanent injury, but that such proposals have not by the Congress been enacted into law."

Mr. Murray: "That is exactly true."

Mr. Pepper: "And if we did have legislation of that character in existence today, would that not have eliminated the necessity of John L. Lewis demanding that there be provided out of the coal industry a fund to take care of the miners who have their backs broken and otherwise have sustained total and permanent disability?"

Mr. Murray: "I think it is obvious that if we had such a law there would be no need for the demand now being made by John L. Lewis."

Let's be fair to Senator Pepper.

'Colors' Rite, Kiss Climax June Week

Annapolis, Md., June 4 (AP).—Dorothy Hargrove, blonde University of Maryland co-ed, enacted June Week's feature role today, when, at a dress parade watched by several thousand spectators, she presented the national and academy colors to the Twenty-Fourth Company of Midshipmen.

For this traditional deed, she was rewarded with a rousing cheer from the entire brigade and with a kiss from Midshipman James Wilson, commander of the Twenty-fourth, who selected Miss Hargrove, his fiance, to present the colors to the Academy's honor company.

The girl, a New Yorker, wore a peach nylon marquisette dress and a large brimmed picture hat. She was escorted onto the parade field by Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, Academy superintendent, and then transferred the colors from last year's winning unit, the Eighteenth Company, to the Twenty-fourth.

Miss Hargrove and Wilson will be married Thursday in New York.

Biggest Peacetime Class

Save for the huge farewell ball tonight, in which all four academy classes participated, this brought to an end June Week of 1946, an dtomorrow morning the biggest peacetime class in the history of the Naval Academy will graduate.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz will deliver the key address at the commencement exercises, and Admiral William F. Halsey will administer the oath of office to 790 midshipmen to receive commissions.

Of this group, 35 will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, 45 as Supply Corps ensigns in the Navy, and the remainder as ensigns in the line of the U. S. Navy. All told, 812 are scheduled to receive diplomas.

Exercises Start at 11 A. M.

Exercises tomorrow will begin at 11 o'clock, with an invocation by Chaplain Everett Wuebbens.

After the graduation, midshipmen of the new first, second and third classes will be given leave until July 4.

More elaborate decorations than last year's distinguished tonight's farewell ball, when for the first time in the academic year plebes are allowed to "drag" (take girls).

Extra Session Still Needed, Say Veterans

Baltimore, June 4 (AP).—Spokesmen for two veterans' organizations said today the action of the War Ballots Commission in easing veterans' voting privileges was "unsatisfactory" and indicated they would press for a special session of the Legislature.

Both pointed out that the voting question was only one of seven points contained in a resolution of veterans' organizations calling for a special session to enact emergency legislation.

The War Ballots Commission ruled yesterday that returned Baltimore servicemen and women who cast absentee ballots in 1944 could have until June 18 to register their party affiliations and thus become eligible to vote in the June 24 primary.

Albert Duke, commander of the Maryland Veterans of World War II, termed the commission's action "little more than a token gesture toward the thousands of Baltimore veterans who were disfranchised for reason of their inability to register or vote during the past five calendar years or to make a declaration of intentions."

Duke and J. Vincent Neeson, an officer of Metropolitan Post No. 5, American Veterans of World War II, said other points in the special session resolution were as important as the voting question.

They said that they had received no official reply from Governor O'Conor on the request for a special session. The War Ballots Commission said it thought a special session unnecessary.

The veterans also had asked for legislative action on a State bonus, a State guarantee of personal loans to veterans, additional appropriations to increase veterans' educational and employment facilities, establishment of a veterans' housing commission and revision of civil service regulations to insure reinstatement of veterans in their former jobs.

New Liner to Load At Baltimore

Baltimore, June 4 (AP).—The first of a fleet of new cargo liners to be placed in operation between Baltimore and South American East Coast ports is en route here today on her shakedown cruise.

H. Frank Sheely, of the Moore-McCormack Co., reported that the vessel, with J. R. Hodges as skipper, would load here for Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

The company plans to sail one of the new liners weekly from Baltimore and other north Atlantic ports upon completion of a fleet of ships now under construction, Sheely said.

Paeonian Springs Tract Is Rezoned For Restaurant

Leesburg, Va., June 4 (Spl.) Upon the recommendation of the zoning commission, the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors reclassified a tract of land on Route 9 in Paeonian Springs from H-1 to H-2 in ordere to allow Harold Pringle, who recently purchased the Paeonian Springs school building, to establish a restaurant there.

A representative of an architect company in Lnychburg appeared before the board with revised drawings of the proposed county jail building. The present building committee was asked to meet with the town councils of the incorporated towns in Loudoun to see if theye would contribute to the jail building fund, or if they would rather pay a fixed sum for the board of prisoners. This decision was reached after it was called to the attention of the supervisors that town offenders are committed to the county jail.

Smith Island Raises Offer For Doctor

Smith Island, Md., June 4 (AP). With medical facilities still about 12 miles away across often rough Chesapeake Bay waters, this little lower bay community was prepared today to offer a $4000 yearly income and a modern home for the services of a resident physician.

The community—a group of three small islands known collectively as Smith Island—lost its only doctor a month ago, when Dr. W. F. Seabold, a retired police physician, died.

Since then, efforts to find a replacement willing to settle on the island for the previously offered salary of $2100 a year have been fruitless. Of the population of approximately 700, some 10 to 15 perpersons have been crossing the bay to Crisfield every day for medical attention.

The island's medical board now has voted to increase the salary from $2100 to $3000 and has offered a guarantee of additional income totaling $1000 to $1500—to be derived from extra fees for obstetrical work, setting broken bones and extracting teeth.

The physician would be furnished a white cottage with seven rooms, a bath, sleeping porch and a view of the Chesapeake through its rear windows. A small clinic has been set up in the basement of the house and the dwelling is equipped with central heating.

The island operates under a socialized medicine plan which provides that each of the 185 families contribute $1.50 each month to pay for medical care and supplies.

He was treasurer of the National Associations of Chief Deputy Game Wardens.

Hastie Foresees New Liberalism In the South

Hampton, Va., June 4 (AP).—William H. Hastie, governor of the Virgin Islands and the first Negro to be named to that office, has predicted that the twentieth century will see the triumph of a new southern liberalism.

He made the prediction yesterday in delivering the commencement address at the 76th annual graduation exercises at Hampton Institute, where he received the honorary degree of doctor of laws, the first honorary degree even conferred by the college.

Hastie declared that already there are two souths, and challenged the Negro college to devote itself to training "top people," with minds disciplined, sharpened, and trained for leadership positions which he said will open for young Negroes, and with the psychological equipment for non-racial living.

Other speakers at the exercises included J. Henry Scattergood, chairman of the institute's board of trustees, and Saul M. Perdue, president of the National Hampton Alumni Association.

Area Schools Issue Awards And Diplomas

Fredericksburg, Va., June 4 (Spl.)—Three young women from as many States won major honors in the Mary Washington College graduating class which completed its commencement program today.

Miss Janice Worsley, of Rocky Mount, N. C., was awarded the Jeffersonian Cup presented annually by the school's National Alumnae Association to the graduate who "has most distinguished herself in scholarship, leadership and service to the college community." The presentation was made by Mrs. Camilla Moody Payne of Washington, president of the association. Miss Worsley also won a scholarship award given by Alpha Phi Sigma, national honorary scholastic society, for attaining the highest scholastic average in her class.

The Kiwanis Cup, awarded yearly by the Fredericksburg Kiwanis Club to the student adjudged by the faculty as having contributed most to the promotion of the interests of the college during her career there, went to Miss Lelia Marsh, of Reedville, Va. Miss Alice Lynch, of Davisville, Pa., received an honor pin from Alpha Phi Sigma for her services to her school.

In the commencement address, Dr. Edgar Graham Gammon, president of Hampden-Sidney College, told the 232 graduates that the "degree you receive today is not only an emblem of achievement, but also a challenge. How you will respond upon receiving it depends first of all on your sense of values, for each one seeks that thing, whether good or bad, which he or she values most . . ."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agriculture May Avoid Slash in Personnel

AGRICULTURE: This department is likely to escape a sharp reduction in force. It has been completely overlooked, but the Senate unanimously adopted a rider to the Agriculture appropriation bill which for all practical purposes exempts the department from personnel ceilings imposed by the Budget Bureau.

Kluttz

Specifically, the rider gives the department full authority to hire additional employes for which increased funds are provided in the supply bill. It goes on to waive that part of the recently enacted Pay Act which gives the Budget Bureau authority to fix personnel ceilings on all Agriculture employes. That act gives the budget director the authority to overrule both the agencies and the Congress.

Similar provisions, it's reported, may be added to other supply bills in the Senate. And if that happens it is most doubtful if the Government will get down to 1,611,000 civilian employes by June 30, 1947, as provided in the Downey-Jackson Pay Act.

HOUSING: Top housing and space officials yesterday visited vacated Spar and Wave barracks. They ordered engineers to survey the properties before they decide to convert them to office space or to continue them as living quarters. They did decide that no use could be made of either barracks until they were repaired.

The Spar barracks may be used to house the Farm Credit Administration which is being moved here from Kansas City; single veterans who are going to school under the GI bill, or by young married veterans.

The Navy already has turned several Wave barracks over to enlisted men who are assigned to office work at headquarters. Several more have or will become vacant and the question to be decided here is whether they are to be turned over to Government girls or to single veterans.

RUMOR: The girls in the West Potomac Park dormitories are worried over reports that they will be ordered out and their rooms will be turned over to veterans who are attending school. This plan was proposed by a top official, but it was quickly dropped when it was pointed out the dorms are 98 per cent filled and that the girls would have no other place to go but back to their homes. So they can quit worrying over that one.

MEMO TO UPWA MEMBERS: You have another unpleasant surprise coming—maybe. I'm told that several members of the House Appropriations Committee are drafting a rider to be nailed onto a deficiency bill that would definitely bar all UPWA members from Federal employment after July 1. The rider, I'm told, will be substituted for the Ball-Russell rider to the Agriculture bill which would deny employment to Agriculture employes who belong to an organization that "asserts" the right to strike against the Government.

Your officials say the Ball-Russell rider is illegal and that it would have no bearing on UPWA members. Perhaps they're right. I don't know. But if I'm correctly informed—and I believe I am—there would be no doubt about the effectiveness of the proposed House rider on UPWA members.

The rider, I'm told, may also deny Federal employment to any Federal worker who follows the Communist Party line. This proposed provision would give civil service and agency heads the legal authority to oust employes whose loyalty is suspected. And it would be tough on those few left-wingers in United Public Workers who advocated and actively supported the anti-American, pro-Russian foreign policy resolution adopted at the union convention.

Left-wing dominated Local 1 meets tonight in the Tariff Building. A scrap is brewing over the compromise foreign policy resolution.

VA: It has openings for 46 supervisory jobs in the insurance division of its Richmond office. Starting salaries range from $2650 to $5180. Contact personnel director of the Richmond office for details . . .

OPA: It wants high school students who live in and near here to take summer jobs as typists and stenographers. CAF-2, 3 and 4 jobs are open to those who can qualify. See Marion Cramer in OPA personnal office, 3d and D sts. sw., or call her on Republic 7500, extension 72063.

NAVY: Bureau of Ships is planning another layoff of employes on July 1 . . . Incidentally, Public Buildings is making a survey of Navy office space. It hopes to persuade, or order, Navy to give up 300,000 feet of space in the Potomac Park area. If it gets the Navy space, it will be turned over to the Army which must give up its new War Building to an expanding State Department.

WAR: An Army survey of Fort Belvoir facilities is reported to have ruled out the proposed transfer of headquarters of the Army Engineers to that station. The Engineers still don't know where they will go. One suggestion is to move flood-control functions to a Midwest city. The Engineers only know they must give up their beautiful quarters in New War.

CIVIL SERVICE: It has developed proposed Civil Service tests for use in the United States occupied zones of Germany and Austria. The job was done by Thomas Bransford, chief of the test development unit.

Morgan College Seeks More State Funds

Baltimore, June 4 (AP).—The board of trustees of Morgan State College, with 1064 applications on hand from prospective students for the next term, was awaiting reaction today to its reuest for funds for additional teachers and equipment.

Judge Morris A. Soper, board chairman, appealed to Governor O'Conor for $50,332 to meet what he termed a "grave" situation at the institution, whose current budget provides for 600 students.

At present, there are 864 students attending classes at Morgan, Judge Soper said, and the board has been "obliged to announce" that it will receive no more than the 1064 applications for the next term.

A similar appeal for funds was made in April by Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, Morgan president.

Governor O'Conor said he "looks with favor" on the reuest for additional funds but added the amount granted would have to be decided by the Board of Public Works.

2 Vets Hired, Strike Halts VA Project

Richmond, Va., June 4 (AP).—Work was virtually halted at McGuire Hospital today on alterations to certain buildings when approximately 30 union carpenters, electricians and plumbers walked off the job because the Veterans' Administration hired two war veterans who were not union members.

The strike came in response to notice served by the unions when they accepted the work some weeks ago. A spokesman for Local 666, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, said the Veterans' Administration was advised at the outset that union members would walk out as son as any nonunion men were employed.

Must Hire Veterans

The Veterans' Administration said it knew the union position, but pointed out the VA is obliged by mandatory provisions of the civil service law to employ veterans when they apply for work. Under regulations governing the United States Employment Service, there was nothing to do, it was said, but to put the former soldiers on the job.

The two nonunion electricians were hired about two weeks ago, but a spokesman at the hospital said the unions did not discover that the men were nonmembers until yesterday. The walkout came at 9:30 a. m. today.

A meeting has been arranged for this afternoon at the branch office of the Veterans' Administration on Lombardy st. Col. Albert R. Berry, director of construction and supply, represented the Veterans' Administration. Spokesmen for the unions included J. F. Joinville, for Local 10, Plumbers and Steamfitters; L. L. Rustad for the Building Trades Council and Grover Wiley, for Local 666, IBEW.

Little conflict in the facts of the matter was reported on either side. Authorities at McGuire Hospital said the two veterans simply were hired along with other workers for the job of tearing down some equipment at the old Diesel school and transporting it to the hospital for use in buildings to be assigned to the insurance division of the Veterans' Administration. Work was progressing satisfactorily on this "top priority" job until the walkout today.

The veterans were identified as Dennis Oliver of Richmond and Edward Tatum of Hopewell.

Va. GOP Head, Tuck in Tilt

Luray, Va., June 4 (AP).—T. R. Dovel of Luray, State Republican chairman, today informed Governor Tuck by letter that he does not intend to furnish, as the governor had requested, the names of six Republicans for consideration in naming a Republican to the three-man bipartisan electoral board to be appointed by the governor.

The Republican State executive committee in March indorsed, by acclamation for appointment to the board Robert M. Woods of Pearisburg, for 16 years chairman of the Ninth District Republican committee. Woods agreed to serve should Mr. Tuck appoint him.

The governor then wrote Dovel asking that six names be furnished from which a Republican could be selected for the place.

The State Republican committee has called a meeting to be held in Roanoke June 15 for the purpose of fixing the time, place and basis of representation for a Republican State convention to nominate a candidate for the United States Senate, subject to the general election in November, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Carter Glass. Dovel said today that in his opinion John Locke Green, prominent Arlington County Republican, is the "logical one to be nominated," in view of Green's "untiring fight to have Virginia fully represented in the Senate."

He referred to efforts by Green before Senator Glass' death to have a vacancy declared in Senator Glass' seat by virtue of the aging Senator's lengthy illness.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ERUDITE Senate Vandenberg of Michigan not only has been doing a good job on foreign relations, but he takes it—and himself—seriously. Perhaps one is necessary to the other. Talking to a friend the other day, the Michigan Senator opined:

"Well, we're getting along pretty well now that we have a Republican foreign policy."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, analyze it for yourself," shot back the man who may be the next GOP nominee. "It all goes back to my speech of January, 1945."

Note—Van claims he is getting bored with politics. "One question I can't answer to my wife's satisfaction," he says, "is why I'm running for reelection (as Senator). I've threatened to divorce her if she asks me again." (The answer, of course, is that if Van doesn't run again for Senator, he won't be in the trial heats for President.)

Russia's One-Time Friend

HOW TRAGICALLY the Russian situation has deteriorated is illustrated by Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson. Once the Soviets' most important friend in the State Department, Acheson is now bitter against them.

Most people don't know that it was Acheson who first helped sell Secretary Byrnes on a conciliatory course toward Russia. Son of the Episcopalian Bishop of Connecticut, Acheson argued that the Russians, despite all their bumptiousness and bad manners, would improve if we showed tolerance, patience. But Acheson has been kicked in the teeth too often.

Senate Labor Rebellion

DEADLIEST backstage punches against President Truman's labor-draft program were scored by CIO President Phil Murray in a secret meeting held by the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Those present included Murray, Lew Hines, AFL legislative representative; Martin Miller, representing Al Whitney's railway trainmen; plus Senators Jim Murray of Montana (chairman), David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Elbert Thomas of Utah, Claude Pepper of Florida, Lister Hill of Alabama, Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania and Wayne Morse of Oregon.

The CIO president got right down to cases.

"My organization has always followed President Truman's recommendations in labor disputes and the record proves it," Murray declared. "Look at the auto, steel and oil disputes. We went along with the fact-finding boards. In some cases we had to accept much below what we asked, but we did so patriotically.

"Can industry say as much?" Murray continued. "Look what happened during the auto strike. General Motors held out for months against the recommendations of Truman's fact-finding board, which labor was willing to accept. That was a case of management striking against the Government, but did President Truman call for a joint session of Congress to upbraid General Motors as he did recently against labor? He did not."

No-Strike Pledge?

THEN, with a scowl, the usually mild-mannered CIO boss acidly added:

"Did he offer legislation then to penalize and enslave all management as he did in this case against labor? Well, I don't remember reading anything about it."

Senator Hill inquired if labor would be willing to offer Truman a compromise on the strike issue, such as a six-month no-strike pledge.

"That is impossible, as far as the CIO is concerned," replied Murray emphatically. "My organization is run on Democratic lines and such a pledge could never be enforced. When members of a CIO union are working under intolerable conditions, I couldn't dictate to them not to strike. Therefore, I would never agree to such a pledge."

Sumner Welles for U. N.

IF PRESIDENT Truman accepts the advice of high-up friends and makes Sumner Welles United States delegate to the United Nations, it will not only rectify an old wrong, but also pick up a policy which Welles sold Roosevelt in 1943, but which has been allowed to lapse for three years—until last month.

This is the policy of writing the peace with all nations—big and little—sitting in. Secretary of State Byrnes finally came around to this idea only last month after his failure at Paris. Welles, however, had urged this on Roosevelt during the height of the war when the Russians still had their backs to the wall at Stalingrad and the British were still in their bombproof cellars. That was the time, Welles argued, when the terms of peace should be written.

Welles also sold Roosevelt on the idea that the small nations would be our best allies for permanent peace. They had the most to lose through war. Their territories were always laid waste. Therefore, not merely the Big Three or the Big Four or the Big Five, which are more likely to start wars, but the little nations which don't want war, Welles urged, should be included in the peace settlement.

Roosevelt agreed. But when Cordell Hull forced Welles' resignation and took his fateful trip to Moscow in the autumn of 1943, he forgot all about the little nations and set up a Council of Big Four Foreign Ministers.

Later Roosevelt tried to pick up the ball by issuing a corrective statement after Hull's return from Moscow. The ball, however, was never really picked up, and the big powers have been bungling the peace of the world from that time on—until Jimmy Byrnes, after learning in the chool of hard knocks, finally adopted Welles' idea following his return from Paris.

Tragic fact is that the peace of the world suffers while men in high places gradually gain experience.

New Chief Justice

INSIDE reason why Truman is having such a hard time making up his mind regarding a new Chief Justice is the fact that he hates to spare Secretary of the Treasury Vinson from his official family.

Daily, Truman leans more and more on Vinson. Along with Jimmy Byrnes, he has the most all-round experience in the Cabinet—service as a Congressman, judge, economic stabilizer, war mobilizer, and head of the RFC. Vinson's ties with Capitol Hill today are even closer than those of Byrnes. Despite official statements to the contrary, the President has given serious consideration to Vinson as Chief Justice, but he hates to part with him.

Portugal Gets Control of U. S. Azores Base

By John M. Hightower
Post Reporter

The United States has turned back to Portugal control of the strategic Azores Island air base developed during the war, while retaining the right to use it for 18 months for military purposes, Secretary of State Byrnes disclosed yesterday.

According to diplomatic informants, the 18-month arrangement falls far short of what the American Government sought in negotiations at Lisbon. These persons, who may not be identified, said the United States would have preferred an agreement for American military use of the facilities running for a long period of years.

For reasons officially undisclosed, the Portuguese government decided against any such plan although the 18 months limitation presumably may be extended by future negotiation.

The Azores constitute one of the strategic focal points for control of the North Atlantic to the extent that the American Government failed to get the long-term military agreement it sought. Its plans for a far-flung system of security bases may have suffered another reverse.

The first known setback became public last month when it was announced that the United States had failed up to that time to get military operation rights at the base it set up during the war in Iceland.

Byrnes told his news conference that this Government had not asked for a permanent Azores base. Reports have been current among diplomats here for many weeks that the United States wanted a regular peacetime base there though it presumably would have been satisfied with an agreement for a base to be set up for a limited period such as 25 or 50 years.

The United States, Byrnes reported, spent about 10 million dollars in developing the Azores base, whcih is on Santa Maria Island. The British developed a base at Lagens on Terceira Island and that, too, has been turned back.

Senate Unit Votes to Restore Prewar Margins

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

The Senate Banking Committee voted an amendment to the OPA extension bill yesterday to permit prewar profits on a wide range of consumer goods.

In an effort to aid the Nation's independent retailers, the committee voted 11 to 4, to reestablish prewar dealer margins on all articles sold on a discount basis.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) who proposed the amendment, said it was intended primarily to aid "the small, independent dealers as contrasted with the chains and the other big merchants."

Specifically, the amendment reestablished the historical 20 per cent margin allowed farm implement dealers. The OPA has reduced this margin to 16 per cent in an effort to hold down prices of such implements. Fulbright said it would also apply to such things as automobiles, tires and refrigerators.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Byrnes and other administration officials were reported to have intervened in an effort to bring about a reversal of the committee action in voting to end price controls on meat June 30.

They are said to have made the argument that if controls are lifted on meat, grains urgently needed to avert starvation in famine-stricken areas will be fed to meat animals with a consequent distribution of the relief program.

Administration leaders intend to move for reconsideration of the committee action in voting to end price controls June 30 on milk, poultry and eggs as well as meat. But several committee members expressed doubt that they would be successful.

The committee, which is trying to conclude the task of rewriting the OPA extension bill tomorrow, rejected by a tie vote of 8 to 8 an amendment by Senator Taft (R.) Ohio, which attempts to spell out the purposes of the Wolcott amendment approved by the House.

The Wolcott amendment, which is vigorously opposed by the Administration, would require that price ceilings after June 30 should be high enough to allow cost of production plus "a reasonable profit" on each item.

The Taft amendment would require ceilings to reflect prices prevailing in the first half of October, 1941, plus increased costs computed on an industry-wide basis on each item since then.

The OPA opposed the Taft amendment on the ground that it was too complicated and would make it possible to figure price ceilings on manufactured goods.

The committee also rejected amendments by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) which would restore prewar dealer margins on all goods and all operations by service establishments, such as laundries and garages.

State Finds 'Pool' Buying of Food Helps Hospitals

Baltimore, June 4 (AP).—A system of buying food in "pools" was viewed today as having brought improvement in the food situation at State mental hospitals.

The system was inaugurated last week to facilitate food purchases and improve diets at the institutions.

Under the plan, foods for all the hospitals are pooled and substitutes for hard-to-get foods are accepted by a buyer from the State department of budget and procurement who visits wholesalers twice a week.

"Things are gradually looking better," said Dr. George H. Preston, commissioner of mental hygiene, "although it is almost too soon for us to say how successful this new method of buying is.

"But we do feel more comfortable and the buyer is finding food substitutes that look as if they will prevent further low calorie diets at the institutions."

Diehy Requested to Resign As Head of Arlington PUC

The resignation of Milton Diehl, Arlington Public Utilities Commission chairman, was requested yesterday by Board Chairman Edmund D. Campbell.

The action followed criticism of Diehl by Campbell for requesting the Interstate Commerce Commission to allow the proposed fare increase of the Arnold operated bus line.

Declaring the request was "unauthorized," the county board head said three members of the PUC declared they were "surprised" at th s'and Diehl had taken.

Advisory Body

The county PUC is merely an advisory body appointed by the county board and Diehl's action in the controversial fare increase caught the board members unawares.

The PUC chairman said he had "no comment at this time."

Campbell said he had acted "in the best interests of the county" in requesting the resignation. Immediately after Diehl's letter to ICC was revealed, Campbell filed a request with the ICC Suspension Board to withhold approval of the increase until a hearing has determined itts justification. His action was supported by a majority of the county board.

Also protesting granting of the increase until the need for it has been thoroughly aired was the public utilities committee of the Arlington Civic Federation.

Hearing on Monday

The bus company's request would raise fares 2½ cents, if tokens were purchased, and 5 cents on straight fares.

A hearing is scheduled Monday by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the question. At the last county board meeting, it was voted to retain proper counsel or a rate expert to investigate the validity of the bus firm's claims in connection with the increase.

But Campbell said yesterday that OPA had engaged its own independent investigator and it is expected the results of his investigation will be made available to the board. This might eliminate the need for the county to conduct its own investigation.

HAPPY MAN IS FREED FROM HARSH LAXATIVES

Suffers for 25 Years Before Discovering Famous Cereal

Do you suffer from constipation? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I suffered from constipation for 25 years. Then a friend told me about Kellogg's All-Bran. I began eating it every day. Now I have natural bowel movements regularly. ALL-BRAN cure is wonderful." William H. Budd, 1681 Cleveland Avenue, Columbus 3, Ohio.

You, too, may never have to take another harsh laxative for constipation due to lack of bulk in your diet — if you eat an ounce of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, and drink plenty of water. If after ten days you are not completely satisfied, send the empty carton to the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan. You will get double your money back! ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. It's a naturally laxative food providing gentle bulk helpful to normal laxation. Eat All-Bran every day as a delicious cereal—or in muffins.

Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's of Battle Creek and Omaha.

Highway Fund Diversion Hit

Baltimore, June 4 (AP).—Charging that a practice of loading non-highway expenses on Maryland road revenues was expanding, William Preston Lane, jr., candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, declared tonight that the State roads commission was in danger of becoming a road maintenance agency.

Lane said it had become a practice to use road funds for a variety of purposes, "some of which have little relationship to the State highway system." The result, he said, was that life, if anyhing, was provided for actual construction.

As an example, Lane cited the State police department. He said highway revenues were taxed in the amount of $418,688.32 for State police in 1941, whereas the sum this year amounted to $964,214, and the 1947 appropriation would be $1,125,647.

strange facts about bread...

Tablecloths of dough!

In olden times, tablecloths were often made of dough. Upon being flavored by drippings from meat, vegetables or wine spilled during the eating of the meal, they were baked and eaten. Today, along with the spotless linen and gleaming silver on the best tables, you'll find Rice's bread. Smart hostesses say, "Rice's Bread is simply delicious." You'll love Rice's tender-fresh goodness too! Try it—see for yourself how Rice's smooth, even texture . . . its delicious "natural wheat" flavor gives you bread at its best.

reach for RICE'S tender-fresh BREAD

On March 20 President Truman told the people of India that the United States would do all that we can and possibly more than we promised to save them from mass starvation.

WELL, WHAT ARE WE WAITING FOR?

ONE hundred million people in India are now eating only one-third as much as Americans, and three hundred million only one half.

This is near starvation. Starvation will come this summer.

If grain shipments from abroad are not heavily increased now, the rationing system which doles out 960 calories daily* to one hundred million people will collapse. Tens of millions of men, women, and children will die within a few days or weeks, and chaos will sweep the land.

Democracy does not thrive under chaos.

India's plight is due to no fault of her own: the worst drought she has ever known destroyed over seven million tons of her grain crops this year.

She has done all she can to help herself. "Due to able and careful administration, and drastic rationing, there is no stark starvation of the famine type in India yet. . . . Every ton of food received will lessen the loss of life from the gigantic danger which impends." (Herbert Hoover, April 24.)

India is begging not for charity, but for the opportunity to buy what she needs to survive.

India needed total imports of two million tons of grain during the January to June period. She was told by the Combined Food Board that she could expect a little over three quarters of this amount. She will actually receive only one quarter.

The United States will have sent India less than one day's supply of food for the whole six months' period.

If India is to ward off famine and chaos which will dwarf all that the world has seen and suffered during the war and after, she must now receive, from May to September, about two and a half million tons of grain.

The United States is India's last hope. Other major supplying countries such as Australia and Canada are already doing their utmost.

What will the United States answer to the last desperate pleas of the starving people of India, and all the world, to act before it is too late?

Will we tell the millions in India who are starving to think of the Chinese who are eating clay, the Chinese to remember the misery of the Greeks, the Greeks to bear in mind the plight of India, and all of them to lie down and die because we are still using millions of tons of wheat a year to fatten our cattle, because each of us is now eating more than ever in our history, because one fourth of our food still ends up in the garbage dump?

*Each American eats an average of 3300 daily.

The purpose of the India Famine Emergency Committee is to make sure that the maximum amount of America's excess food is made available to the famine sufferers of the world and that India's victims receive an equitable share. We need your help to carry on our work. We will be glad to have your contribution.

LET THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ACT BEFORE THEIR GOVERNMENT COMMITS IN THEIR NAME A TERRIBLE CRIME OF OMISSION

HERE ARE QUESTIONS FOR YOUR CONGRESSMAN

If you don't know the name of your Congressman, find it out from your local paper or any citizens' group.

CLIP THIS OUT AND SEND IT TO HIM TODAY

1. India needs about two and a half million tons of food grains to arrive in India by regular shipments from May to September. How much wheat will leave the United States for India in June? July? August?

2. Herbert Lehman recently stated: "One of the largest animal populations in our history is daily eating grain needed to save lives. Each bushel of grain could keep alive five people for each one who could be fed from the meat produced by this grain." Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson stated on May 14 that four and a half million tons (150,000,000 bushels) of wheat would be used to fatten livestock from July 1, 1946 to June 30, 1947. This amount could easily feed 25 million persons for one year. Why is this food going to livestock when it could be used to save human beings?

3. A Government program still in force pays a bonus of 50 cents per hundred pounds of cattle and hogs marketed above normal weights, which means stuffing them with grain desperately needed by human beings. Why is this practice continued?

4. Mr. Lehman and 100 other prominent citizens recently urged the Government to reduce our huge numbers of livestock now fattening on wheat by slaughtering as fast as possible one million head of cattle and five million hogs, and storing the meat for the use of our citizens and the hungry abroad. Large quantities of wheat would thus be saved. This seems a sound idea. Why isn't it being done?

5. At least one million tons of wheat could be saved annually by making our white bread darker, as other countries have done. Why don't we do it? (And don't tell me people won't stand for it.)

6. Secretary Anderson has announced that thirteen and a half million tons (450,000,000 bushels) of wheat are to be reserved for human consumption in the United States from July 1, 1946 to June 30, 1947. This means that every American will eat—in addition to all the other food he gets—half a pound of wheat daily. But half a pound of wheat a day is about all the hungry abroad eat. We could easily eat more potatoes, of which we have a surplus and which are very difficult to ship. Now then, answer this: Why must we keep such a huge quantity of wheat for our own consumption when we have substitutes that are just as good?

7. It is now agreed that we face a long-term food crisis. Why hasn't the Government taken steps to re-establish rationing of key foodstuffs?

8. What statements have you made or do you intend to make in Congress and what action have you taken or do you intend to take concerning the urgency of increasing our help to India and other peoples in dire need?

Dear Congressman:

I would appreciate immediate and specific answers to the above questions. PLEASE RETURN THE LIST OF QUESTIONS WITH YOUR ANSWERS.

Sincerely yours,

Rails Report April Deficit Of 21 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

The coal strike and wage increases put the Nation's railroads deep in the red during April, according to the monthly report of the Association of American Railroads.

Class 1 carriers had an estimated deficit of $21,300,000 in April, compared with a net income of $55,557,900 in the same month last year, the AAR reported yesterday.

For the first four months this year, the railroads had an estimated deficit, after interest and rentals, of six million dollars compared with net income of $196,860,976 in the corresponding 1945 period.

Net railway operating income, before interest and rentals, totaled $10,127,739 in April against $95,065,326 in April, 1945. For the first four months net railway operating income aggregated $118,830,374 compared with $344,945,307 in the same period of 1945.

The AAR stated that in the 12 months ended April 30, the rate of return on carriers' investment averaged 2.26 per cent compared with 3.93 per cent for the previous 12 months.

The association said the railroads' total operating revenues in the first four months of 1946 totaled $2,432,814,881 compared with $3,054,808,819 in the same period of 1945 or a decrease of 20.4 per cent. Operating expenses in the first four months of 1946 amounted to $2,076,267,783 compared with $2,105,579,731 in the corresponding period of 1945 or a decrease of 1.4 per cent.

VEPCO Plans New Notes

Virginia Electric & Power Co. asked the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday to approve its proposal to issue $6,500,000 of notes to banks.

The application said the notes would replace old notes with the issue resulting in a lower interest rate and extension of maturities.

Total of the new notes would exceed the old ones by $1,305,000 and this money would be used principally in a 10-million-dollar construction program.

Oil Exploration Stressed

Replenishment and extension of crude petroleum reserves is the most important task confronting the Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), Eugene Holman, president, told the annual shareholders meeting.

Holman added, "the present ceiling price on crude, despite an increase this spring, does not, in our opinion, provide a return sufficient to allow producers in general to carry on the vigorous exploration which must be undertaken if we are to find new oil in quantity.

"So far as we can judge at present," Holman said, "earnings for the first six months of 1946 will approximate $85,000,000. However, in giving this estimate, it must be borne in mind that events of the last half of the year, in which there now appear to many uncertainities, may have significant effect on results of the total year's operations.

In the first half of 1945 the company earned around $80,000,000.

Bendix to Double Space

Bendix Aviation Corp. will require for its peacetime operations nearly twice the manufacturing space utilized in prewar years, Ernest R. Breech, president, said yesterday in a report to stockholders.

He said the corporation expects to own or have under lease by the end of the current fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1946, 4,278,703 square feet of space, compared with 2,183,129 as of Dec. 31, 1939.

However, Breech declared, "prices for Bendix products now being supplied the automobile industry do not recoup increased wages and other costs, and price relief is imperative."

New SEC Aide Takes Oath

Richard B. McEntire, former chairman of the Kansas State Corporation Commission, was sworn in yesterday as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He was appointed to fill the unexpired term ending June 5, 1948, created by resignation of Sumner T. Pike.

Commissioner Robert E. Healy, only remaining member of the original commission, also was sworn in yesterday for his third five-year term at Temple University Hospital, where he is convalescing from a recent illness.

Earnings Statements

West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. and subsidiaries reported for six months ended April 30 net profit of $2,300,173, equal to $2.18 a common share, compared with $1,145,783, or 89 cents a share in the like 1945 period.

City Stores Co. reported consolidated net profit for three months ended April 30 of $1,281,642, equal to 80 cents a share on the common and Class "A" stock. This compared with $560,222, or 35 cents on the common and "A" shares, in the comparable 1945 quarter.

Jim Crow Signs Remain in Some Virgina Buses

Interstate bus operation between Virginia and Washington was normal last night, Supreme Court decision and Jim Crows sign notwithstanding.

The Supreme Court ruled Monday that segregation of passengers on interstate bus lines is a burden to the operating bus companies and thereby unconstitutional. In the wake of the ruling, some of the State law signs were removed; others left in place.

The Jim Crow signs designating seating of Negro and white passengers were removed from all buses of the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transic Co., operating between Alexandria and Washington. A company spokesman reported, however, that Negroes continued to prefer the rear seats.

Signs Still Posted

Similar signs remained on buses operated by the Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co., better known as the Arnold line.

"I don't know whether the signs will be taken down, but they probably will," declared Sherman Wilson, personnel manager for the Arnold line.

Wilson said he believed the Supreme Court decision would make "no substantial difference" in bus operation.

"Our drivers have all been instructed not to enforce the State law in light of the court's decision," Wilson said. "However, they never did before except on specific complaint and such instances were rare."

Seeks Clarification

Franklin K. Lane, president of the Arlington-Fairfax Motor Transportation Co., which also serves Washington and Virginia, looks to clarification of the ruling before ordering removal of the signs from his company's buses.

In summation, all agreed that habit was stronger than Supreme Court decisions and passengers continued to seat themselves as before.

Maryland to Use Bacterial Dust On Jap Beetles

By the Associated Press

Maryland's annual war against destructive Japanese beetles soon will be on in full swing.

With a bacterial dust ready to use against the insects that destroy trees and shrubs, George Langford and Ernes N. Cory, university of Maryland entomologists, predicted the State soon would have "full relief" from serious damage by the beetles.

Previously, "milky disease spore dust" has been spread by hand in infected areas. This year the bacterial weapon will also be spread from a new dispenser in areas of heavy infection.

This dispenser will catch flying beetles, cover them with the dust, then release them to return to their breeding grounds and infect grups, thus killing them before they can mature.

The beetles also will be fought withwith DDT, traps and parasitic insects.

Approximately 10,000 pounds of the spore dust will be distributed among the various counties in Maryland.

Md. Income Tax Receipts Drop

Annapolis, Md., June 4 (AP).—Resident individual income tax payments through May 31 decreased from $6,047,062 on 1944 returns to $4,804,351 on 1945 returns, Comptroller J. Millard Taxes reported today.

The drop reflected the 50 per cent discount allowed individual taxpayers in filing their 1945 returns.

Corporations, on the other hand, which had no reduction in their 1945 income tax payments, paid $1,551,613 compared to $1,227,800 on their 1944 returns for the same period.

Historic Md. Farm Is Sold for $3300

Hagerstown, Md., June 4 (AP).—The 253-acre farm on which John Brown, the abolitionist, is reputed to have mustered his forces preparatory to storming the arsenal at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., was sold today at public auction of $3300 to Earl Nelkirk.

The farm is located in Washington County, Md., about two miles from Harpers Ferry. Auctioneer Joseph Snyder had a tough time getting bids, the auction running 25 minutes overtime.

The property was sold by the executors of the estate of the late Florence V. Ankeney.

Md. Hearing Set In Cowboy Suit Damages Case

Cumberland, Md., June 4 (AP).—Attorneys said today a hearing would be held in Circuit Court here June 12 on a deefnse demurrer to a suit seeking $50,000 damages for a child who was burned when his cowboy suit caught fire.

The suit was filed on behalf of the victim, James Edmund Detrick, through his father, Israel Edmund Detrick of Ridgely, W. Va. The defendants are Louis P. Lutz and his wife, Mrs. Ida K. Lutz, trading as Lou's Auto Stores here.

The demurrer denies that the store owners were responsible for the boy's injuries.

The plaintiff asserted that the suit, bought as a Christmas present for the boy, was warranted to be safe, but that the "chaps" were made of a chemically-treated and highly inflammable material.

On the day after Christmas, the suit alleges, a spark from a bonfire ignited the cowboy suit and the boy suffered burns that kept him confined to a hospital for 20 months.

Rollins' Trial Set Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., June 4 (AP).—The Navy disclosed today that Chief Steward Walter W. Rollins, 46, Negro, would go on trial Thursday (10 a. m.) on charges including embezzlement, theft, conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline and two other undisclosed counts.

The court martial had been scheduled for May 6, but Rollins, through his counsel, Capt. Frans Willenbucher and Mrs. Evelyn Baker Richman, asked for a delay in order to prepare his defense.

Rollins was one of four Naval Academy personnel detained as the result of an investigation touched off by an early morning party at his quarters, February 10.

Raw material of good judgment...

FACTS

It would be easier, we believe, to build a new home without lumber and nails than to exercise good judgment without facts. All the facts.

Fortunately, there is no shortage of this essential raw material—facts. Some searching may be required, certainly some thought is required to interpret facts intelligently, but they are available.

TO WAR VETERANS . . . facts mean that precious funds need not be wasted in fine-sounding but unsound ventures. The real worth of any glib "opportunity of a lifetime"—whether in securities, in business or elsewhere—should be and can be determined—by getting the facts first.

TO WAR BOND OWNERS . . . the use of facts means conservation of the hard-earned, productive savings these bonds represent. Even a brief study of the facts demonstrates the wisdom of holding War Bonds until they mature.

TO INVESTORS . . . facts offer a safeguard against needless risk . . . a bulwark against the temptation to buy or sell securities on the basis of tips, rumors or sudden impulses.

It is the established policy of this Exchange to foster, in every way possible, the principles of informed investment. To do so, it seeks constantly to increase the amount of information available to the investor. Before any company lists its securities on the New York Stock Exchange, that company agrees to report, regularly, facts essential to reasoned investment decisions.

We urge every investor to make full and frequent use of this information. Values change . . . in securities as in any other form of property . . . in this market as in any other.

In investment, facts are your best protection against unnecessary risk. With facts, and only with facts, you can build toward a sound financial future.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, June 4.—There's $1,750,000 already in the till for the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight 15 nights hence, and Promoter Mike Jacobs says it ought to hit two million dollars before the week is out. Apparently the third million will be the hardest, but Uncle Mike says they'll get it in all right.

POVICH

The big item is, of course, those ringside seats at $100 per copy which are a very fashionable number with business firms, plain rich people and the career big-shots who wouldn't be caught in anything less than the highest-priced seat.

Nobody has pinned Jacobs down as yet to the exact number of $100 ringside issues he plans for the first printing. He neatly sidesteps that question, with the observation that anybody with $100 and tax can buy a $100 seat. The suspicion is that he won't turn down any $100 customer if he has to designate the upper, lower and central Bronx as ringside sections.

It's not quite true, that out-of-town yokels are the folks who are gobbling up the $100 ringsides with native New Yorkers passing them up. Thousands of choice seats are going to the Coast, and Chicago and Texas and Boston, but Jacobs' biggest source of revenue is still New York, and if you want us to be specific, it's downtown New York.

New York business firms are the fight's best customers. New York businessmen might not give a hoot for the Conn-Louis fight as such, but it's good business for a businessman to have tickets to the fight. It gives him standing with his out-of-town clientele, and the wonderful thing about those $100 tickets is that in the case of a business firm, they're deductible.

Larry MacPhail of the Yankees discovered the appeal choice seats to his ball game has for New York banking houses, hotels, wholesale concerns, public relations outfits and other firms who like to impress potential customers with their importance. MacPhail organized his exclusive Stadium Club for buyers of season box seats, with special privileges in the gaudy saloon and dining rooms included, and sold nearly $400,000 worth of Yankee tickets before the season opened.

For businessmen, the $100 fight tickets are interpreted as a legitimate business expense under the heading of sales programs, and in the end it's Uncle Sam who pays most of the freight in tax losses. Firms in the higher tax brackets are discovering that it's smart to buy fight and baseball tickets for customer entertainment, at what adds up to a little cost to themselves.

Even Promoter Jacobs is vulnerable to excess profit taxes and because of that the customers are getting a break. For the first time in boxing history, the ringside seats to a big fight will be elevated. Jacobs is spending $200,000 for a structure to be placed around the ring on the infield of Yankee Stadium that will enable ringsiders to see the show without a craning of necks. It will shut off the view of about 7000 front seats in the lower grandstand, and Jacobs will lose that revenue, but he has his own tax matters to think about.

A bit startling to recall to memory is that the last time Louis and Conn fought they drew a mere $340,000, far less than a dozen other Joe Louis gates, and then you remember that it didn't shape up as a very attractive fight. Conn was just another number, it was presumed, on Louis' "bum-of-the-month parade," an overstuffed middleweight who didn't have much business in there with the champion.

What happened is, of course, the reason the June 19 gate might hit three million dollars. Conn beat Louis' ears off for the most of 13 rounds before he missed with a right, got hit with a right, and was knocked stiff. A return Conn-Louis match is what the fight business has been demanding for five years, and now it's coming up, and so is customer interest.

Up at Conn's Greenwood Lake camp the other day, Jacobs wasn't excited when his Madison Square Garden flunkies raced to him with the complaint that Conn was playing baseball and "he might get hoit, and what happens to the big fight?" Jacobs dismissed the whole possibility. "About anybody else, I might be worried," he told newspapermen. "About Conn and Louis, I ain't worried. They got too much guts. They'll go in the ring June 19, if they have to drag themselves in."

Through the war years, when Louis was struggling a bit on his sergeant's pay, and Conn was downright broke as a corporal, they kept putting the touch on Uncle Mike. What they'll owe him out of their purses for advances I never knew until yesterday when Jacobs said "They're in me for two yards." (That's 200 grand, grandson.)

Hogan's Sub-Par Play Wins Goodall

Hogan Fires Sub-Par to Win Goodall

Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—Ben Hogan, who had looked like the winner after the first round of the $10,000 Goodall round-robin golf tournament, came home the winne rtoday at the end of seven rounds.

The Texas lightweight left no doubt about it by saving his two best rounds for the last. With a two-under-par 70 over the waterlogged winged-foot course this morning, he whipped Jimmy Demaret 5 up and Jimmy Hines 4 up.

Hogan followed that up with a 69 this afternoon in what could have been a thrilling but actually was a somewhat anticlimactic match with Byron Nelson and Vic Ghezzi. When the match began Hogan already was 16 points ahead of the field, and the principal question was what the winning margin would be.

By turning back Nelson and Ghezzi by a 3-up each, Hogan picked up 6 points. That made his total for the 126 holes of match play in which he beat all but one of his 14 rivals, plus 51. That denoted a total of 51 more holes he had won than he had lost.

The triumph, Hogan's second in the Goodall and third in succession this season, gave him $2000 for a year's winning to date of $22,069.50 Nelson's third prize money of $1000 left him in second place for the year at $11,998.75.

In addition, Hogan and Nelson split the $300 offered for the low medal rounds. They tied for first place at 502, two under par for the seven rounds and excellent under the prevailing conditions.

Final point score and money won—Hogan, plus 51 ($2000); Mangrum plus 26 ($1400); Nelson plus 22 ($1000); McSpaden plus 21 ($900); Keiser plus 19 ($700); Little plus 13 ($600); Ghezzi plus 5 ($550); Hines plus 3 ($500); Snead and Barron each plus 2 (each $425); Harrison and Byrd each minus 10 (each $337.50); Demaret minus 26 ($300); Hamilton minus 44 ($275); Burton minus 74 ($250).

Doerr Gets 6 Safeties In 9-4 Win

Boston, June 4 (AP).—Coming from behind, the Red Sox exploded for six runs in the eighth inning today, defeating the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 4, for their sixth consecutive victory and their thirteenth home success without defeat against Western clubs.

Bobby Doerr had a field day as he slugged his fifth homer of the year with one on and then proceeded to collect two doubles and a single.

Doerr drove in four runs in the game which was played in a heavy mist, to bring his league leading RBI total to 40.

Doerr, who also handled eight chances perfectly afield, started the big eighth inning with a double and later in that same frame singled to left to drive in two runs.

Pinky Higgins, making his first start at third base for the Sox since being purchased from the Tigers, got himself three hits, including a double, in four trips as he drove home two runs.

Eleven of the Hose went to bat in the big eighth against Tex Shirley, who had relieved Starter Denny Galehouse, and against Cliff Fannin, third Brownie flinger.

Lefty Earl Johnson, third Boston pitcher, was the winner. Johnson, commissioned on the battlefield for gallantry in Europe, also got himself a hit in his only appearance at bat and drove in a run in the eighth inning. It was his fourth victory of the season, all in relief.

Giants Outhit Chicago Cubs But Lose, 3-2

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Hank Wyse and Russ Meers were touched for 15 hits today but the Chicago Cubs, with seven safeties, still managed to nose out the New York Giants, 3-2

Peanuts Lowrey scored the winning run in the eighth inning when he doubled, advanced to third on a wild pitch by Relief Pitcher Gene Thompson and counted on Marv Rickert's fly to Goody Rosen

The Giants scored their initial run in the fourth inning on three hits but the Cubs came back in their half with two markers on a walk, singles by Lowrey and Phil Cavaretta and a double by Clyde McCullough.

Wyse walked Babe Young with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth to force in the tying run and gave way to Meers in the next frame after yielding two consecutive singles. Meers limited the Giants to two hits the rest of the way to gain credit for his first triumph of the season.

Haynes Walks 3 in 8th As Yanks Beat Chisox

Nw York, June 4 (INS).—Joe Haynes, Chicago White Sox pitcher, issued three straight passes in the eighth inning today to give the New York Yankees a 2 to 1 victory in their series opener.

The win was Spud Chandler's eighth of the season. He has lost two games.

This victory, which maintained the seven-game margin between the second-place Yankees and the roaring Boston Red Sox, was helped by a homer by Tommy Henrich in the sixth after Don Kolloway had put the White Sox oon top with a home run in the fifth.

With one away in the eighth, Snuffy Stirnweiss got the sixth and final hit off Haynes, and took second on Henrich's out. Haynes purposely walked Charley Keller and allowed Joe DiMaggio to work him for a walk. He then couldn't get the ball over for Nick Etten and Stirnweiss trotted home with the winning run. Chandler allowed only seven hits and walked no one.

Ump Quits, Says Pasquel 'Calls 'Em'

Mexico City, June 4 (AP).—Umpire Amado Maestri, who threw Mexican League President Jorge Pasquel off the field Sunday, said today he is "through with the league forever."

Owen

"I'll walk out of anybody's league when the president can walk in and take sides," he told the United Press, as he displayed airplane tickets for his home in Havana, Cuba.

"The Mexican League surely will break up if Jorge continues to call the decisions," Maestri said.

"Jorge came onto the playing field Sunday during the Mexico City-Vera Cruz game and said I didn't know what I was talking about when I called a foul ball on Carlos Colas.

"I know that my decision put Vera Cruz in a likely position to lose the game and I know that Jorge Pasquel's favorite team is Vera Cruz. But the president of the league has no right to come onto the field and contest my decision.

"Vera Cruz Manager Mickey Owen's gripes against me were all right—he's a player and that happens all the time."

The trouble came in the ninth inning with the score tied 9-9. Mexico City's potential winning run, Bill Wright, was on third and Colas was at bat. Harry Feldman was pitching for Vera Cruz.

Wright came home and was tagged out on what many spectators thought was a strike by Colas. Maestri declared the ball was foul and ordered Wright back to third.

Owen contested the decision and was soon joined by Pasquel who jumped onto the eld from his box. Maestri ordered them both off the eld. Vera Cruz finally won in the twelfth inning, 11-9.

"Jorge Pasquel told me to leave the field," Maestri said. "And I told him I would gladly leave the field—after the game—and would never return."

Bassler, Bogart Tie With 71s At Chevy Chase

C. T. Bassler, Baltimore, and Ralph Bogart, Washington, tied for medalist honors with 71s yesterday in the qualifying round of the Middle Atlantic Amateur Championship.

Earl Skinker and Bobby Brownell, both of Washington, tied for third place with 72.

Par for the course is 35, 34—69.

A field of 101 players, up to prewar size and quality, trod over the difficult Chevy Chase course all day in quest of 16 places in match play, which starts tomorrow.

Late starters were still out on the course well after the dinner hour and indications were that a playoff would be required for some of the match-play places.

The forty-third championship event attracted a number of champions of other years, inclcuding Brownell, Georget Voigt, former Walker Cup star; Harry Pitt, Washington; Spencer Overton, Catonsville, Md., and Otto Greiner, Country Club of Maryland.

Greiner only yesterday won a place in the National Open at Cleveland, June 13, by finishing fourth with 147 in sectional qualifying play at the Burning Tree course in competition with leading professionals in this area.

Honeymoon Heads Hollywood Field

Inglewood, Calif., June 4 (AP).—The smallest stake field of Hollywood Park's meeting—five 3-year-old fillies headed by Louis B. Mayer's Honeymoon—lined up today for the $25,000 1-mile Hollywood Oaks tomorrow.

Honeymoon, a strong favorites because of a convincing win over older fillies and mares in the 7-furlong Sequoia Handicap 10 days ago, has been assigned heavy package of 126 pounds and will be ridden by Jackie Westrope, current jockey leader here.

Others entered, with weights and jockeys, are C. V. Whitney's Enfilade, 120, C. L. Martin; H. N. Isenberg's Going With Me, 114, Ralph Neves; George Galea's Aptos Honey, 112, Ray Ranum, and Ryana Ranch's Good Excuse, 106, Nick Wall.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., June 4.—Sweaters and letters were awarded to those members of the graduating class of Shepherd College here for competition in major sports at the seventy-third commencement exercises yesterday. Those recognized were given certificates of title by Coach Cletus D. Lowe in lieu of the sweaters themselves which are not yet available.

Giant Pitcher Injures Arm

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Bob Carpenter, right-handed pitcher of the New York Giants, probably will be out of the game for three weeks or longer as a result of tearing a ligament in his throwing arm today.

Carpenter sustained the injury in snapping his wrist while delivering a curve ball to Marvin Rickert, Cub outfielder, in the fourth inning. An examination at the local hospital after the game disclosed the ligament had been torn at the elbow.

Mickey Witek, Giant second baseman, suffered a torn ligament in his right elbow last April 28 and hasn't been able to play since then, although he now is nearing recovery.

'Little Bums' Quieter Than Dodgers

Fort Worth, Tex., June 4 (AP).—Fort Worth's "Little Dodgers" are as unlike their major league big brothers as say Connie Mack and Lippy Leo Durocher. But they're getting the same results—they're quietly leading the Texas League while Brooklyn is racuously topping the National.

Just because Brooklyn owns the Fort Worth franchise was no reason for the Cats to think the appellation "Bums" one of endearment. In fact, these fellows wouldn't like it. Neither do they care for fisticuffs.

For a week or so the Cats apparently were trying to imitate Lippy Leo in questioning the umpires but eventually they noted that Manager Ray Hayworth (15 years in the big leagues) never, never charged the arbiters and that when he did go out for a talk it was without raising his voice.

For the past month the Cats have rarely looked back at the umpires. They just play ball, with blinding speed and fine throwing, and all to their drawing power. They average between 3000 and 4000 per game; sell-outs are frequent.

They are young (starting team averages 23 years), quiet and gentlemanly, they train more religiously than anv ball club Fort Worth ever had. They dress neatly on road trips and most of them go to church on Sunday morning.

Opposing managers can't even get Hayworth to gripe. Skipper Al Vincent of Dallas was about to be pitched out of the park for riding the umpires one night. He asked Ray to give him a little help, pointing out that the decisions were affecting Fort Worth as well as Dallas. But Ray just sat quietly by.

The Cats don't even resemble the old-time Fort Worth clubs that won so many pennants in the twenties. Those were largely loud-talking, horny-handed fellows. But they say here the 1946 Cats can out-think most old-time ball clubs 10 to 1.

Backbones of the team are Barney White, third base, and Lou Welaj, shortstop, both college boys. Most of the Cats are former service men, including Lou Ruchser, who was an aerial gunner with 48 missions. Branch Rickey, they say, wouldn't sell him for less than $100,000. Scouts rate him one of the greatest fielding first basemen of all time down here.

'Schnozz' Day June 18

New York, June 4 (AP).—The Section Five Club, an organization of Ernie Lombardi with a special New York Giant rooters, will honor "day" at the Polo Grounds night game with the Cincinnatti Reds June 18.

Brown Meets Sharkey on Rassle Card

The spotlight again will be turned on Natie Brown tonight at Turner's Arean, where the local wrestler will seek revenge in a return battle with Babe Sharkey, the former champion.

Brown dropped a much-disputed decision to Sharkey last week after the District grappler claimed that Referee Buddy McQuade first awarded him the fall. McQuade alleges that Sharkey's legs were dangling outside the ropes at the time he was counting him out, and therefore he was forced to change the verdict. When upon Sharkey, taking advantag of the relaxed Brown, dropped him to the canvas with an armlock and body slam.

Angelo Savoldi and Chick Garibaldi, two heroes now turned villains, will clash in a special match, while a couple of Irish-born grapplers—Bert Hellion, the hammer throwing champion, and Pat Welsh (the former Irish Angel) meet in an added attraction. Other bouts find Stu Hart, Canadian ace, against Ace Freeman, and Bill Middleka ff agains. Mike Heller. First bout is at 8:45.

50 Winchester Boys Seek Legion Berths

Winchester, Va., June 4.—C. Ridgely White, chairman, reported today that 50 youngsters have shown interest in trying out for the Winchester Junior Legion baseball team. Practice sessions are expected to start next week, with the first games scheduled in July. Other legion teams are being organized in Berryville and Front Royal. Assisting White on the local committee are F. L. Largent, jr., and Kenneth Robinson.

Broadbent To Coach W.-L Mat and Track

Lexington, Va., June 4 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Harry H. Broadbent, former University of Oklahoma athletic star, has been named head coach of wrestling and track at Washington and Lee University, Athletic Director R. A. (Cap'n Dick) Smith announced tonight.

Smith said Broadbent, now officer in charge of the public relations epartment of the Fourth Naval District, Philadelphia, also may be called on to assist Coach Art Lewis with the General football team next autumn.

Broadbent will report to Washington and Lee on September 1, Smith said. His addition to the athletic coaching staff is another step in Washington and Lee's plans to return to the place the Generals held in intercollegiate athletics before the war.

Broadbent succeeds former Coach Art Mathis, who went to the University of Illinois after service in the Navy. When Broadbent was commissioned in the Navy, he held the post of assistant to Col. W. A. Bishop in the department of physical education at the University of Pennsylvania.

As a senior at the University of Oklahoma in 1936, Broadbent won the nationad intercollegiate 175-pound wrestling championship when the national tournament was held at Washington and Lee. He won some championships on Oklahoma's track and field teams and played two years of football for the Sooners.

Assault Owner Has King's Brother for '47

New York, June 4 (AP).—Robert J. Kleberg, jr., and Trainer Max Hirsch, who guided Assault to racing's triple crown this year, already are looking toward 1947 because of Clean Slate, full brother of the present king of the 3-year-olds.

Clean Slate has started twice in sprints this year and hasn't won although his terrific stretch drive has brought him a second and a third.

Winchester, Va., June 4.—Winchester was winner in the Tri-State team bowling tournament recently completed at Frederick, Md. The local keglers defeated Hagerstown in the finals, 1870 to 1697.

Half Million To See Epsom Derby Today

Epsom, England, June 4 (AP).—A half million race fans, including Britain's royal family, are expected to converge upon historic Epsom Downs tomorrow for the first running of the Derby over this grassy, undulating course since before the war.

Twenty of the nation's finest 3-year-olds remained eligible for the gruelling mile and one half classic, but three of them—Sky High, Peter Van and Aldis Lamp—were not considered probable starters.

Lord Derby's Gulf Stream, the leading 2-year-old of 1945, and Sir William Cooke's Happy Knight, winner of the 2000 guineas a month ago, were the leading choices tonight to lead the field home.

"I think Gulf Stream is the big danger," said Maj. J. J. Astor, son of Lord Astor, whose hopes for his first Derby triumph ride on the colt Fast and Fair. Lord Astor's entries have finished second in five Derbys.

Gulf Stream has only one blemish on an otherwise perfect record, a lifeless race in the 2000 guineas, where he finished fourth behind three other Derby candidates, Happy Knight, Khaled and Radiotherapy.

His rider will be the noted Harry Wragg, who has ridden three Derby winners and has finished in the money more times than he can count on the fingers of one hand.

Three of tomorrow's probable runners—Qui Va La, Friar Tuck and Massif—have not finished in the money in their past three races and are expected to be extreme long shots when the bookies start calling their odds in Tattersall's Ring.

Gordon Richards, most famous of Britain's riders, has the mount on Mrs. R. N.

Rokeby Jake Beaten in Stretch Run

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—Making his first start of the year, W. V. Rose's Edmer Jojan came along with a stretch rush that carried him to a half length victory in the Frederick Purse, featuring the Tuesday program here. With Jockey E. Churchill doing the booting the son of Misstep and Pugnacity returned a $14.40 mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 5000.

J. H. Morris' Rokeby Jake, the favorite in the field of eight, was second ahead of Mrs. P. G. Simms' Intermission.

Track Somewhat Heavy

The winner performed over a track that was somewhere between heavy and slow and registered time of 0:52 for the abbreviated spring route of about 4½ furlongs.

Rokeby Jake, waay from the races since 1943 before he ran third here last week, went to the top directly after the break and opened a good lead. Intermission was closest to the pace with Jujube next and Edmar Jojan in fourth position. Approaching the stretch, Edmar Jojan went to the outside, rallied and wore down Rokebp Jake to win going away. Intermission was a tireig third.

C. C. Pascal horses, trained by L. Pascal, jr., accounted for two races in succession. Jockey E. Carillo booted Louis L. home in the fourth race to the tune of a $59.40 mutuel and Jockey W. Dufford donned the white and purple silks to pilot Credence to victory in the fifth.

Successful daily double players collected $19.80 on the "5 and 6" combination. Scratches riddled the first race field and B. P. Bond's Vitesse was a winner at a $3.60 favorite under George Rose's handling. J. L. Friedman's Mr. Secretary took the second event at an $8 pay-off.

Between races...The dollar haircut hasn't hit Charles Town as yet—6$ cents this a. m.... Two horsese were injured and were late scratches...Syphon was taken out of the first and True Lass was withdrawn from the second...The last named was kicked on the way to the... post...Apprentice G. Cusimano, a Washington boy, is showing good saddle form...His brother Frank, former rider hereabouts, is still in the Army...Galt Davis Binge from Bosley...C. E. Farr sold Ashame to V. S. This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, June 4.—There's $1,750,000 already in the till for the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight 15 nights hence, and Promoter Mike Jacobs says it ought to hit two million dollars before the week is out. Apparently the third million will be the hardest, but Uncle Mike says they'll get it in all right.

POVICH

The big item is, of course, those ringside seats at $100 per copy which are a very fashionable number with business firms, plain rich people and the career big-shots who wouldn't be caught in anything less than the highest-priced seat.

Nobody has pinned Jacobs down as yet to the exact number of $100 ringside issues he plans for the first printing. He neatly sidesteps that question, with the observation that anybody with $100 and tax can buy a $100 seat. The suspicion is that he won't turn down any $100 customer if he has to designate the upper, lower and central Bronx as ringside sections.

It's not quite true, that out-of-town yokels are the folks who are gobbling up the $100 ringsides with native New Yorkers passing them up. Thousands of choice seats are going to the Coast, and Chicago and Texas and Boston, but Jacobs' biggest source of revenue is still New York, and if you want us to be specific, it's downtown New York.

New York business firms are the fight's best customers. New York businessmen might not give a hoot for the Conn-Louis fight as such, but it's good business for a businessman to have tickets to the fight. It gives him standing with his out-of-town clientele, and the wonderful thing about those $100 tickets is that in the case of a business firm, they're deductible.

Larry MacPhail of the Yankees discovered the appeal choice seats to his ball game has for New York banking houses, hotels, wholesale concerns, public relations outfits and other firms who like to impress potential customers with their importance. MacPhail organized his exclusive Stadium Club for buyers of season box seats, with special privileges in the gaudy saloon and dining rooms included, and sold nearly $400,000 worth of Yankee tickets before the season opened.

For businessmen, the $100 fight tickets are interpreted as a legitimate business expense under the heading of sales programs, and in the end it's Uncle Sam who pays most of the freight in tax losses. Firms in the higher tax brackets are discovering that it's smart to buy fight and baseball tickets for customer entertainment, at what adds up to a little cost to themselves.

Even Promoter Jacobs is vulnerable to excess profit taxes and because of that the customers are getting a break. For the first time in boxing history, the ringside seats to a big fight will be elevated. Jacobs is spending $200,000 for a structure to be placed around the ring on the infield of Yankee Stadium that will enable ringsiders to see the show without a craning of necks. It will shut off the view of about 7000 front seats in the lower grandstand, and Jacobs will lose that revenue, but he has his own tax matters to think about.

A bit startling to recall to memory is that the last time Louis and Conn fought they drew a mere $340,000, far less than a dozen other Joe Louis gates, and then you remember that it didn't shape up as a very attractive fight. Conn was just another number, it was presumed, on Louis' "bum-of-the-month parade," an overstuffed middleweight who didn't have much business in there with the champion.

What happened is, of course, the reason the June 19 gate might hit three million dollars. Conn beat Louis' ears off for the most of 13 rounds before he missed with a right, got hit with a right, and was knocked stiff. A return Conn-Louis match is what the fight business has been demanding for five years, and now it's coming up, and so is customer interest.

Up at Conn's Greenwood Lake camp the other day, Jacobs wasn't excited when his Madison Square Garden flunkies raced to him with the complaint that Conn was playing baseball and "he might get hoit, and what happens to the big fight?" Jacobs dismissed the whole possibility. "About anybody else, I might be worried," he told newspapermen. "About Conn and Louis, I ain't worried. They got too much guts. They'll go in the ring June 19, if they have to drag themselves in."

Through the war years, when Louis was struggling a bit on his sergeant's pay, and Conn was downright broke as a corporal, they kept putting the touch on Uncle Mike. What they'll owe him out of their purses for advances I never knew until yesterday when Jacobs said "They're in me for two yards." (That's 200 grand, grandson.)

Hogan Fires Sub-Par to Win Goodall

Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—Ben Hogan, who had looked like the winner after the first round of the $10,000 Goodall round-robin golf tournament, came home the winne rtoday at the end of seven rounds.

The Texas lightweight left no doubt about it by saving his two best rounds for the last. With a two-under-par 70 over the waterlogged winged-foot course this morning, he whipped Jimmy Demaret 5 up and Jimmy Hines 4 up.

Hogan followed that up with a 69 this afternoon in what could have been a thrilling but actually was a somewhat anticlimactic match with Byron Nelson and Vic Ghezzi. When the match began Hogan already was 16 points ahead of the field, and the principal question was what the winning margin would be.

By turning back Nelson and Ghezzi by a 3-up each, Hogan picked up 6 points. That made his total for the 126 holes of match play in which he beat all but one of his 14 rivals, plus 51. That denoted a total of 51 more holes he had won than he had lost.

The triumph, Hogan's second in the Goodall and third in succession this season, gave him $2000 for a year's winning to date of $22,069.50 Nelson's third prize money of $1000 left him in second place for the year at $11,998.75.

In addition, Hogan and Nelson split the $300 offered for the low medal rounds. They tied for first place at 502, two under par for the seven rounds and excellent under the prevailing conditions.

Final point score and money won—Hogan, plus 51 ($2000); Mangrum plus 26 ($1400); Nelson plus 22 ($1000); McSpaden plus 21 ($900); Keiser plus 19 ($700); Little plus 13 ($600); Ghezzi plus 5 ($550); Hines plus 3 ($500); Snead and Barron each plus 2 (each $425); Harrison and Byrd each minus 10 (each $337.50); Demaret minus 26 ($300); Hamilton minus 44 ($275); Burton minus 74 ($250).

Watch Those Spikes, Buddy

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TWO DEAD BIRDS—New York Giant Centerfielder Goody Rosen is out at second when Cub hurler Hank Wyse grabbed Willard Marshall's bounder and whipped it to Shortstop Len Merullo, who relayed it to first in time to complete a double play in the first inning of their game yesterday, won by the Cubs, 3-2. Looks like Rosen wasn't fooling with those spikes but he didn't bluff Merullo

Doerr Gets 6 Safeties In 9-4 Win

Boston, June 4 (AP).—Coming from behind, the Red Sox exploded for six runs in the eighth inning today, defeating the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 4, for their sixth consecutive victory and their thirteenth home success without defeat against Western clubs.

Bobby Doerr had a field day as he slugged his fifth homer of the year with one on and then proceeded to collect two doubles and a single.

Doerr drove in four runs in the game which was played in a heavy mist, to bring his league leading RBI total to 40.

Doerr, who also handled eight chances perfectly afield, started the big eighth inning with a double and later in that same frame singled to left to drive in two runs.

Pinky Higgins, making his first start at third base for the Sox since being purchased from the Tigers, got himself three hits, including a double, in four trips as he drove home two runs.

Eleven of the Hose went to bat in the big eighth against Tex Shirley, who had relieved Starter Denny Galehouse, and against Cliff Fannin, third Brownie flinger.

Lefty Earl Johnson, third Boston pitcher, was the winner. Johnson, commissioned on the battlefield for gallantry in Europe, also got himself a hit in his only appearance at bat and drove in a run in the eighth inning. It was his fourth victory of the season, all in relief.

Giants Outhit Chicago Cubs But Lose, 3-2

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Hank Wyse and Russ Meers were touched for 15 hits today but the Chicago Cubs, with seven safeties, still managed to nose out the New York Giants, 3-2

Peanuts Lowrey scored the winning run in the eighth inning when he doubled, advanced to third on a wild pitch by Relief Pitcher Gene Thompson and counted on Marv Rickert's fly to Goody Rosen

The Giants scored their initial run in the fourth inning on three hits but the Cubs came back in their half with two markers on a walk, singles by Lowrey and Phil Cavaretta and a double by Clyde McCullough.

Wyse walked Babe Young with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth to force in the tying run and gave way to Meers in the next frame after yielding two consecutive singles. Meers limited the Giants to two hits the rest of the way to gain credit for his first triumph of the season.

Doerr Gets 6 Safeties In 9-4 Win

Boston, June 4 (AP).—Coming from behind, the Red Sox exploded for six runs in the eighth inning today, defeating the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 4, for their sixth consecutive victory and their thirteenth home success without defeat against Western clubs.

Bobby Doerr had a field day as he slugged his fifth homer of the year with one on and then proceeded to collect two doubles and a single.

Doerr drove in four runs in the game which was played in a heavy mist, to bring his league leading RBI total to 40.

Doerr, who also handled eight chances perfectly afield, started the big eighth inning with a double and later in that same frame singled to left to drive in two runs.

Pinky Higgins, making his first start at third base for the Sox since being purchased from the Tigers, got himself three hits, including a double, in four trips as he drove home two runs.

Eleven of the Hose went to bat in the big eighth against Tex Shirley, who had relieved Starter Denny Galehouse, and against Cliff Fannin, third Brownie flinger.

Lefty Earl Johnson, third Boston pitcher, was the winner. Johnson, commissioned on the battlefield for gallantry in Europe, also got himself a hit in his only appearance at bat and drove in a run in the eighth inning. It was his fourth victory of the season, all in relief.

Haynes Walks 3 in 8th As Yanks Beat Chisox

Nw York, June 4 (INS).—Joe Haynes, Chicago White Sox pitcher, issued three straight passes in the eighth inning today to give the New York Yankees a 2 to 1 victory in their series opener.

The win was Spud Chandler's eighth of the season. He has lost two games.

This victory, which maintained the seven-game margin between the second-place Yankees and the roaring Boston Red Sox, was helped by a homer by Tommy Henrich in the sixth after Don Kolloway had put the White Sox oon top with a home run in the fifth.

With one away in the eighth, Snuffy Stirnweiss got the sixth and final hit off Haynes, and took second on Henrich's out. Haynes purposely walked Charley Keller and allowed Joe Dimaggio to work him for a walk. He then couldn't get the ball over for Nick Etten and Stirnweiss trotted home with the winning run. Chandler allowed only seven hits and walked no one.

Ump Quits, Says Pasquel 'Calls 'Em'

Mexico City, June 4 (U.P.).—Umpire Amado Maestri, who threw Mexican League President Jorge Pasquel off the field Sunday, said today he is "through with the league forever."

Owen

"I'll walk out of anybody's league when the president can walk in and take sides," he told the United Press, as he displayed airplane tickets for his home in Havana, Cuba.

"The Mexican League surely will break up if Jorge continues to call the decisions," Maestri said.

"Jorge came onto the playing field Sunday during the Mexico City-Vera Cruz game and said I didn't know what I was talking about when I called a foul ball on Carlos Colas.

"I know that my decision put Vera Cruz in a likely position to lose the game and I know that Jorge Pasquel's favorite team is Vera Cruz. But the president of the league has no right to come onto the field and contest my decision.

"Vera Cruz Manager Mickey Owen's gripes against me were all right—he's a player and that happens all the time."

The trouble came in the ninth inning with the score tied 9-9. Mexico City's potential winning run, Bill Wright, was on third and Colas was at bat. Harry Feldman was pitching for Vera Cruz.

Wright came home and was tagged out on what many spectators thought was a strike by Colas. Maestri declared the ball was foul and ordered Wright back to third.

Owen contested the decision and was soon joined by Pasquel who jumped onto the eld from his box. Maestri ordered them both off the eld. Vera Cruz finally won in the twelfth inning, 11-9.

"Jorge Pasquel told me to leave the field," Maestri said. "And I told him I would gladly leave the field—after the game—and would never return."

Honeymoon Heads Hollywood Field

Inglewood, Calif., June 4 (AP).—The smallest stake field of Hollywood Park's meeting—five 3-year-old fillies headed by Louis B. Mayer's Honeymoon—lined up today for the $25,000 1-mile Hollywood Oaks tomorrow.

Honeymoon, a strong favorites because of a convincing win over older fillies and mares in the 7-furlong Sequoia Handicap 10 days ago, has been assigned heavy package of 126 pounds and will be ridden by Jackie Westrope, current jockey leader here.

Others entered, with weights and jockeys, are C. V. Whitney's Enfilade, 120, C. L. Martin; H. N. Isenberg's Going With Me, 114, Ralph Neves; George Galea's Aptos Honey, 112, Ray Ranum, and Ryana Ranch's Good Excuse, 106, Nick Wall.

Bassler, Bogart Tie With 71s At Chevy Chase

C. T. Bassler, Baltimore, and Ralph Bogart, Washington, tied for medalist honors with 71s yesterday in the qualifying round of the Middle Atlantic Amateur Championship.

Earl Skinker and Bobby Brownell, both of Washington, tied for third place with 72.

Par for the course is 35, 34—69.

A field of 101 players, up to prewar size and quality, trod over the difficult Chevy Chase course all day in quest of 16 places in match play, which starts tomorrow.

Late starters were still out on the course well after the dinner hour and indications were that a playoff would be required for some of the match-play places.

The forty-third championship event attracted a number of champions of other years, inclcuding Brownell, Georget Voigt, former Walker Cup star; Harry Pitt, Washington; Spencer Overton, Catonsville, Md., and Otto Greiner, Country Club of Maryland.

Greiner only yesterday won a place in the National Open at Cleveland, June 13, by finishing fourth with 147 in sectional qualifying play at the Burning Tree course in competition with leading professionals in this area.

Men given the awards included: William L. Fournier, Messina, N. Y., one year in football; William Harold Henderson, Slanesville, W. Va., three years in football; John Hyde Lewis, jr., Bunker Hill, W. Va., three years in football; Lawrence Russell Williamson, Martinsburg, W. Va., three years in football, one year in baseball.

Giant Pitcher Injures Arm

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Bob Carpenter, right-handed pitcher of the New York Giants, probably will be out of the game for three weeks or longer as a result of tearing a ligament in his throwing arm today.

Carpenter sustained the injury in snapping his wrist while delivering a curve ball to Marvin Rickert, Cub outfielder, in the fourth inning. An examination at the local hospital after the game disclosed the ligament had been torn at the elbow.

Mickey Witek, Giant second baseman, suffered a torn ligament in his right elbow last April 28 and hasn't been able to play since then, although he now is nearing recovery.

'Little Bums' Quieter Than Dodgers

Fort Worth, Tex., June 4 (AP).—Fort Worth's "Little Dodgers" are as unlike their major league big brothers as say Connie Mack and Lippy Leo Durocher. But they're getting the same results—they're quietly leading the Texas League while Brooklyn is racuously topping the National.

Just because Brooklyn owns the Fort Worth franchise was no reason for the Cats to think the appellation "Bums" one of endearment. In fact, these fellows wouldn't like it. Neither do they care for fisticuffs.

For a week or so the Cats apparently were trying to imitate Lippy Leo in questioning the umpires but eventually they noted that Manager Ray Hayworth (15 years in the big leagues) never, never charged the arbiters and that when he did go out for a talk it was without raising his voice.

For the past month the Cats have rarely looked back at the umpires. They just play ball, with blinding speed and fine throwing, and all to their drawing power. They average between 3000 and 4000 per game; sell-outs are frequent.

They are young (starting team averages 23 years), quiet and gentlemanly, they train more religiously than any ball club Fort Worth ever had. They dress neatly on road trips and most of them go to church on Sunday morning.

Opposing managers can't even get Hayworth to gripe. Skipper Al Vincent of Dallas was about to be pitched out of the park for riding the umpires one night. He asked Ray to give him a little help, pointing out that the decisions were affecting Fort Worth as well as Dallas. But Ray just sat quietly by.

The Cats don't even resemble the old-time Fort Worth clubs that won so

Edmar Jojan Wins Charles Town Feature

Rokeby Jake Beaten in Stretch Run

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—Making his first start of the year, W. V. Rose's Edmer Jojan came along with a stretch rush that carried him to a half length victory in the Frederick Purse, featuring the Tuesday program here. With Jockey E. Churchill doing the booting the son of Misstep and Pugnacity returned a $14.40 mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 5000.

J. H. Morris' Rokeby Jake, the favorite in the field of eight, was second ahead of Mrs. P. G. Simms' Intermission.

Track Somewhat Heavy

The winner performed over a track that was somewhere between heavy and slow and registered time of 0:52 for the abbreviated spring route of about 4½ furlongs.

Rokeby Jake, waay from the races since 1943 before he ran third here last week, went to the top directly after the break and opened a good lead. Intermission was closest to the pace with Jujube next and Edmar Jojan in fourth position Approaching the stretch, Edmar Jojan went to the outside, rallied and wore down Rokebp Jake to win going away. Intermission was a tireig third.

C. C. Pascal horses, trained by L. Pascal, jr., accounted for two races in succession. Jockey E. Carillo booted Louis L. home in the fourth race to the tune of a $59.40 mutuel and Jockey W. Dufford donned the white and purple silks to pilot Credence to victory in the fifth.

Successful daily double players collected $19.80 on the "5 and 6" combination. Scratches riddled the first race field and B. P. Bond's Vitesse was a winner at a $3.60 favorite under George Rose's handling. J. L. Friedman's Mr. Secretary took the second event at an $8 pay-off.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Expecting Her Third Child, Wife Discovers That Husband She Thought Incorruptible Is Having Affair With Secretary; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I must have advice, and there is no one nearby in whom I can confide; so will you please help me? I have just learned for certain—after months of suspecting,—that my husband is having an affair with his secretary. He is past 30 and she is 10 or 12 years younger.

We live in a rather small town, and the girl is making herself deliberately offensive to me. She actually sneers in my face. It is an impossible situation. We have been married for nine years and have two children, both under six; and a third is on the way.

What should I do? Should I start divorce action now, and go through the ordeal of having the baby alone? Or should I insist that he shoulder his responsibility, too? I don't know if I have the moral backbone to stay on in these circumstances, all the time wondering where he is. Strangely enough, he doesn't want a divorce.

He was always so fine and decent, until this happened,—a good father, a good provider and a kind husband. But now he has changed so much towards me. There is a sort of a wall between us that I can't break down. I have always loved him very much, and I am shocked to my very soul that he is capable of such a thing. Please advise me. E. W.

Girl Appears To Be Aggressor

DEAR E. W.: Since your husband doesn't want a divorce, and is moreover a good father, a good provider and kind to you—even though somewhat of a stranger since getting involved with the hussy-secretary,—my advice is: Drop the subject until the third child has been delivered. Then if your sense of justice still demands that solution, go back to it.

Nothing would please the secretary more than for you to leap into divorce action like a wild woman. So just don't give her that satisfaction. It seems to me that you hold winning cards over her, if you want to use them to spoil her game.

Her malevolent sneers openly aimed at you aren't triumphant gloating, as you infer. They expose her as a brazen character, yes; but they also show that she is savagely jealous of you. And I can only suppose that she knows and resents something that you would find hard to believe, namely: Even though your husband is being unfaithful, and even though she has him sex-ensnared, nevertheless about 90 per cent of his real regard still belongs to you.

Man Loves Wife In Special Way

HE CARES for you in a very special consistent way,—as men do care for a good and loving wife, who is to them a composite figure of mother, sister, pure sweetheart and friend, and whom they keep on a pedestal in their heart even when (or particularly when) they have taken a trollop-mistress. She, no doubt, is determined to displace you; and galled by his balky, evasive indication that there shall be no change in the status quo. So she vents her spleen by hating you; and I daresay she spends a great deal of time trying to needle him into thinking you're a drag on his style.

Also, I suppose she feels conspicuously guilty and defensive about the harm she's done and is trying to do you,—with the eyes of a small town watching her,—and people who feel thus usually show aggressive hostility towards the victim. In any event, a trollop never makes faces at another woman unless she fears her; and if this girl thought she was easy winner—with your husband wanting her more than she wants him; or liking her more than he likes you,—she wouldn't be using this brass knuckle play.

Naturally it is a terrible shock for any good wife to find herself coping with a kindly husband suddenly turned adulterous. But sociologists are warning that one of the evil fruits of World War II will be an overall rise in sex immorality,—caused by the wholesale destruction of men, which leaves a heavy surplus of women scrambling ruthlessly for male attention. And if that situation develops, I think it smart business for a wife to defend her priority claim to the husband she has, if she happens to love him—and a female desperado comes trying to muscle in. M. H.

Flower Girl 'Beats the Gun' At Andrews Field Wedding

By Eva Hinton

THE little Maryland country church which suddenly found itself incorporated into a government reservation and serving as Post Chapel of Andrews Field was scene of a wedding the other day, when Col. Logan Osburn Shutt, assistant chief of staff for intelligence at Bolling Field, led his dark-eyed daughter, Margaret, up the middle aisle to be married to Maj. Arthur Jackson Hardy, jr.

But first the colonel had retrieved his tiny granddaughter, Robin, who as flower girl had wandered up the aisle too soon. She wanted to get the thing over, because she didn't like wearing her long pink organdy dress and big pink organdy hat.

At the proper time her grandfather picked her up, whispered in her ear and headed her toward the altar. Two pretty bridesmaids, Louise Brady and Barbara Talbert, in blue with coronets and bouquets of summer flowers, had preceded Robbin. The matron of honor, who wore pink, was Mrs. Joseph L. Pleasants, mother of Robbin and sister of of the bride.

The bride wore a lovely sheer, white dress brocaded in white flowers. Clusters of pearls held her veil at each temple and her bouquet was of massed white gardenias.

Guests from the Army included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. St. Clair Streett, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Homer Oldfield, Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Fogle. From Baltimore came Mr. and Mrs. James Price 3d, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Robbins and Grainger Marburg.

Col. and Mrs. Shutt, the latter wearing gray satin, were hosts at an informal reception after the wedding, when the health of the bride and bridegroom was drunk in champagne punch served from a frosted silver punch bowl.

CAPT. and Mrs. John Creighton are off on a trip that sounds like every stay-at-home's dream. They are going to China on a spic-and-span Danish freighter with only 10 other passengers aboard, all of whom they know.

Captain Creighton has retired from the Navy and is taking up business in China. They will live in Nanking and a friend already has found a house for them. They are taking everything with them from soap to nuts (hardware), which has meant a great deal of shopping, since they've rented their Georgetown house furnished.

I saw the Creightons at Wolf Trap Farm the other afternoon when they were saying goodby to Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse and regretting that they will not be here for the Wolf Trap "Have Fun Carnival" Saturday.

Final plans for entertainment were being made by committee members, among them handsome Jean Wallace and her fiance, Lieut. Leslie Douglas, and popular Emily French Myers and her fiance, Capt. Herman Havenor.

"What," said one sweet young thing who is on the list of "taxi-dancers" to another ditto, "does it mean here on the program 'Wolves of Wolf Trap' heading a long list of men?"

"I suppose," replied the other SYT, "that it's a building for them. I wonder if they will live up to it!"

I hear that bushy-browed John L. Lewis has taken 10 tickets for the carnival! (Imagine, bringing your own bushes with you to the country!) He must have heard about the delicious empanadas and tamales which will be sold by Mrs. Tom Burke and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and which are specialties of their famous, nonstriking cooks, Claire and Tomasa!

WE AMERICANS love a wise crack, especially when it is at the expense of someone else, and a maker of wise cracks is always popular . . . So, I expect Lord Inverchapel, the new British Ambassador to our shores, will be popular with the American public.

He stepped off the Queen Mary, after a voyage crowded among English war brides of Canadian soldiers and their babies, with the remark that "British children are always good-looking! It's only when they grow up that they become ugly."

All of which reminds me of the famous wise crack (French division) made by Anatol France about British women. He said, "When they are beautiful they are beautiful as angels! But when they are ugly they don't know where to stop!"

Honors Affianced Pair

Mrs. William Frederick Pearson will give a luncheon tomorrow at her home to honor Miss Mal Sykes and Richmond Cunningham, who will be married Friday. Guests will include members of the bridal party.

Our darling imps

Our boys can raise a rumpus that . . . is loud as it can be . . . And honestly we must admit . . . They do it constantly . . . And when they call upon the folks . . . Who live around our way . . . The neighbors ring our telephone . . . And this is what they say . . . "Your boys are perfect gentlemen . . . And very quiet, too . . . And therefore we would like to pay . . . . A compliment to you" . . . . And when they come to visit us . . . Their boys are as good as gold . . . And their respectful manners are . . . A pleasure to behold . . . So we return the compliment . . . And their surprise appears . . . No less than ours when they declare . . . Our boys are perfect dears.

Children Need Own Play Spots After Pen Has Been Outgrown

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It would be wonderful if one could tell a mother how to deal with children so they wouldn't act like children. But no methods devised will insure that by acting in stated ways a child will never get into the parent's possessions and misuse them.

Those are hazards we all face when we have children.

No Easy Task

The parent, unless she has older children who can keep the baby out of mischief and tell him how to act, will have to take over the job herself. And it is continuous. If she is busy and cannot work with the baby under her feet, then she has to concoct some safe place where he can be kept busy and happy.

The best place for the young baby is a playpen. When he is able to climb out of that, then he should have some room or portion of a room where he can have his toys, climb on the furniture and yet do himself no harm.

Here's Good Idea

Mrs. D. A. R. writes: "After my boy outgrew his playpen I let him have the run of the house and, of course, found that this wasn't a good idea. Then we got the idea of putting our breakfast-room table on rollers so it could be easily removed. We put a gate across the entrance. The boy has toys in the nook and is content to play there for hours. This has been such an ideal solution that I wondered if other readers might not be able to use the same idea."

I'm sure they can. This is so much better than spending one's time picking the child out of tight spots and then, in fear and anger, laying on the punishment!

Are We Making Equal Sacrifices?

What is the English food ration today, and how does it compare with the supply available to Americans under the present voluntary food conservation program? The question is answered in the following letter, sent to the New York Herald Tribune by a British reader.

I read, with scorn and fury, reports from the American press of Britain's willingness to "parallel" the sacrifices made by the United States to reduce food consumption. Has any reputable daily paper in America ever dared publish a list of our present rations? I inclose such a list and beg you, in the interests of honesty and justice (characteristics of your paper) to make these known.

I, my husband, two small children and an unnecessary, but nice, cat and dog exist and have existed for three or four years on such rations, or a slight variation of them. Other commodities, such as syrup, suet, beans and cereals, are heavily rationed on a "points" system.

Wealthy American visitors who stay in luxurious London hotels are not aware of, or interested in, the lot of the ordinary British public; there is no reason why they should be, but pray let them and their compatriots reflect on their own weekly consumption of food before talking glibly of equal sacrifices.

'Laffing Room,' True to June, Busts Out All Over at National

By Nelson B. Bell

"LAFFING ROOM ONLY." The Messrs. Shubert and Olsen & Johnson present the musical melange in two acts and 23 scenes, starring O. and J., with Frank Libuse, Willie West and McGinty and Harrison and Fisher, surrounded by Mary La Roche, Eleanor Tennis, Margot Brander, Billy Young, Shannon Dean, Joe Young, Harry Burns, Charles Senna, Ernest D'Amato, J. C. Olsen, Catherine Johnson, Andrew Ratoushef, Virginia Barrett, Eddie Franklin, Dippy Diers, June Walker, Susan West, Irene Carroll, Vivian Collins, Gene Wilson, Brayton Lewis, Ernest Richman, Wayne McIntyre, Ben Yost Singers and a numerous ensemble.

Book by Olsen and Johnson and Eugene Conrad; music and lyrics by Burton Lane; dances by Robert Alton; costumes by Billy Livingston; comedy directed by Edward Cline.

Production designed by Stewart Chaney; staged by John Murray Anderson. At the National Theater.

Anyone wishing to be in on the full course of sprouts packaged under the title of "Laffing Room Only," at the National this week and next, would do well to note that the ads specify 8:15 p. m., for evening performances and 2:15 for matinees.

As has become part of the Olsen and Johnson tradition, the buffoonery begins in the lobby—practically at the curb, as a matter of fact—extends down the aisles and boils over into the orchestra pit, as the audience is finding its way, under more than ordinary difficulties, to its seats. It continues through the intermission, with an epilogue while the customers are filing out.

Such a thing as a "review" of any Olsen and Johnson gaucherie is as impossible as attempting a word picture of an exploding bunch of firecrackers. Noise, frenzy and confusion are breaking out all over, just like the June they usher in on E st.

Up to the Individual

Nobody could possibly like it all, any more than anybody could fail to like parts of it. Although last night's capacity audience was a trifle slower than usual in getting into the intimate spirit of the thing, and in some instances into the thing itself, the final verdict was overwhelmingly enthusiastic for the plaintiff.

Having kidded the pewholders out of their eye teeth while the lights were still up, Prof. Libuse went into the real insanity of the evening by conducting a trick orchestra through an overture more bizarre than anything Spike Jones and His City Slickers ever dared attempt. From that point on lunacy remained in the saddle for a solid three hours.

The bulk of the trip-hammer nonsense is concentrated in the 17 scenes of the first act. The six scenes of the final stanza reveal a decided change of pace, with accent on the best musical numbers of the three hours, the best dancing and that inevitable climactic audience stunt, in which the participants are rewarded by prizes taking the form of heavy loads of desirable merchandise.

Two-in-One Twist

The show is given an effective comedy twist by the pretense that through an error in booking both the "Laffing Room Only" company and the Moscow Art Theater are holding forth in the same theater for the evening.

The catalogue of those principally in evidence appears in the small-type paragraph preceding these midnight maunderings.

The Russian intervals, involving Catherine Johnson, Vivian Collins, Wayne McIntyre and J. C. Olsen, were in the main effective burlesque, made the medium of some of the potpourri's most indelicate moments.

Among the heterogeneous assortment of songs, dances, gags, satires, pretentious ensembles and plain "ham," the highlights seemed to your aisle-seater to be "Go Down to Boston Harbor," an early bit of choreography that seemed to have a vague connection with the Boston Tea Party, with Irene Carroll singing the song and Eleanor Tennis and Ernest Richman soloing among the dancers; Harrison and Fisher in the first of their inimitable dance satires; Olsen and Johnson's rowdy skit, "An Apartment in 1980"—heaven forbid!—"Stop That Dancing," sung by Mary La Roche, a thoroughly competent song stylist, with full company support; Willie West and McGinty, in their roughhouse gem of pantomime and perfect comedy training; the decidedly "sophisticated" Pullman interlude, "The Ghost Train," with its spectacular climax.

Legitimate Show-Stopper

Too many minor episodes to mention, continuously occupy the stage and slop over into the aisles, the boxes and the most remote recesses of the theater. As Mr. Olsen remarks truly enough, "We may not be entertaining you, but at least we're keeping you awake!"

The one unequivocal show-stopper of the entire goings-on is contributed early in the second act by Eddie Franklin, an Irish kid with a Chauncey Olcott voice, just out of a long stretch with the colors. Olsen with his violin, Chic Johnson at the piano and Harry Burns, guitar, stopped their clowning long enough to give him beautiful accompaniment in "Danny Boy" and "My Blue Heaven."

"Laffing Room Only" is big, raucous and rollicking. In their own particular groove Ole and Chic have gone and done it again!

You Should Know . . .

Perfume should be kept in a dark, cool place, away from light.

The birthstone for June is the pearl or moonstone.

The Japanese beetle likes corn and asparagus best. It also relishes certain kinds of fruit.

In 1945 there were more than 5000 women in the United States holding positions as bank executives.

In Egypt and Palestine, betrothal rings were either carved from stone or beaten from gold or copper.

Be SMART

IMAGINATION in design and material makes a double duty dress real fun. For example, a crush resistant black or brown linen princess—as handsome a sunback dress as you could wish—becomes something entirely different when combined with a high-color conversation print in a surplice overblouse with cape back.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Setback For Women

THE old nemesis of career women, "reorganization," now is threatening the few remaining top level women administrators in the Government. Under the President's Reorganization Plan No. 2, three administrative positions long held by outstanding women would be abolished, and a fourth would be put under new supervision, with inevitable loss of authority and rank.

The United States Employes' Compensation Commission, of which Mrs. Jewell W. Swofford has been chairman since 1933, and of which former Senator Hattie W. Caraway is a member, would be abolished, some of its functions going to the Federal Security Agency.

The Social Security Board, of which Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward is a member (succeeding Miss Mary W. Dewson, who pioneered in getting women into Government policy-making posts), would be abolished, its functions put under the Federal Security Agency.

The Office of Assistant Commissioner of Education, held by Miss Bess Goodykoontz, would be abolished, its duties to be performed by the head of one of the divisions in the Office of Education.

The Children's Bureau, headed by Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, would be transferred, exclusive of its industrial division, to the Federal Security Administrator, its functions to be "performed by him or under his direction and control by such officers and employes of the Federal Security Agency as he may designate."

ALL four of the women whose offices are involved have distinguished records of service and Nation-wide reputations. If the usual results of "reorganization" in government, business or the professions follow this one, they will find themselves, if not on the outside looking in, most probably in positions that carry less authority and opportunity, and that involve more detailed assistance to a man executive. There is a real danger that the Government may lose the benefit of their ability and experience.

Women leaders, already alarmed at the retreat of their sex from policy-making positions in government, are expected to protest parts of Reorganization Plan No. 2 which, unless Congress adopts a resolution of disapproval, will go into effect 60 days from May 16, the date it was sent to Congress. The Committee on Women in World Affairs, which has worked arduously for women on international commissions, is now especially concerned that this country, leader of Western democracy, may have to stand before the world as a man-run Government—which is the usual totalitarian pattern.

If the plan is accomplished, only one woman will remain in a top-level Government position in the United States—Mrs. Lucille McMillin, member of the Civil Service Commission. Within recent years women have lost a Cabinet post, two foreign ministers, three members of the Veterans' Board of Appeals, and an assistant administrator of Federal Works.

WOMEN leaders also fear the plan represents a trend toward the bigness in admisintration, of which President Truman recently warned in a commencement address. They point out that the boards and bureau to be abolished functioned exceptionally well as small, relatively independent units. Also two of the boards, now bipartisan, will become more political in administration under the new setup.

Vague promises to "take care" of the highly competant women being "reorganized" are falling on deaf ears of the women leaders concerned over the situation. Nor are they impressed by the conjectures over a woman's being given the new Cabinet post of Welfare recommended by Plan No. 2. To consider the personnel of a department not yet set up by Congress, they term a "mirage chasing expedition."

They feel strongly that if the women affected by the reorganization cannot retain their present or similar posts, they should be placed in positions of equivalent rank and authority in which the Nation could benefit by their talents. Among the suggestions are a woman special assistant at the White House and an Assistant Secretary of State.

New Filter Will Help You Make Good Coffee

Even the coffee maker you are now using can go modern if one of the new Dutch clothless coffee filters is used. It really has many points of superiority. It can't pop out. It can't fall out. To clean, just run hot water over filter. It is practically unbreakable, will fit all standard makes.

All you need do is to measure water into lower bowl of coffee maker and place on heat. Insert filter into funnel tube of upper bowl, then measure coffee into upper bowl. Insert upper into lower and you're on the way to a fine brew.

Bowed Legs And Knock-Knees Often A Needless Defect

Doctors report that many a child with ugly bowed legs or knock-knees might have grown up straight and shapely on a diet adequate in the bone-building minerals and Vitamin D.

Lack of calcium, for instance, in the earliest years may do irreparable damage—but, in any case, calcium is so vital a factor that no child brought up on a consistently deficient calcium intake, can have much chance for strong bones and sound teeth.

That's one reason doctors talk so much about milk for growing children.

Milk is our best food source of calcium. Do your children get enough milk...at least a quart every day? Many children just don't like to take that much every day! That's why Cocomalt in milk is so helpful.

Cocomalt* is so rich in calcium, it makes 3 glasses of milk equal to a whole quart in calcium value! (Also this supplies the day's full minimum requirements for iron, phosphorus, Vitamins B, and D.) And Cocomalt's delicious chocolaty flavor makes children love their milk.

Start your children on Cocomalt today. Save this as a reminder.

*2 heaping tsps. to 8-oz. glass of milk...

EISENHOWER'S CHIEF OF STAFF reveals

How We Won the War in Europe

Here is the first authoritative account of the momentous decisions and major strategy, both Allied and German, that led to Hitler's defeat in the west. Written by Walter "Beetle" Smith, the general who served as Eisenhower's chief of staff.

▶What were the six great decisions that determined the whole course of the war in Europe? What were the events that led up to them? How did General Eisenhower carry the crushing responsibility for making them? And how successful were the results?

Lt. General Walter Bedell Smith tells the dramatic inside story of these crucial decisions in a series of six fascinating articles beginning in today's Post. Each article covers an important phase of the war and is complete in itself.

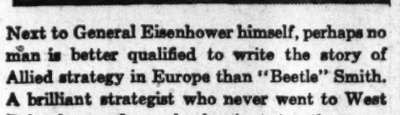
From his own experience as Eisenhower's chief of staff, General Smith is able to give us an authentic picture of Allied strategy. And from captured German documents—and his personal interviews with German generals—he reconstructs in detail the counter-strategy of the enemy.

These six articles give the first complete picture of the master-minding of the war in Europe. They are as exciting to read as fiction, yet as authoritative as an official communique. The Post is proud to present them and believes they will become a part of American history.

LEARN THE ANSWER TO THESE AND MANY OTHER QUESTIONS

Where did the German High Command expect us to invade the Continent?
How many times was the invasion postponed?
Why did the Germans fail to use V-bombs to attack our embarkation ports in England?
What was the key to the German strategy for defending Fortress Europe?
How did Eisenhower "prepare" himself to pick the right day for invasion?

Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith



Next to General Eisenhower himself, perhaps no man is better qualified to write the story of Allied strategy in Europe than "Beetle" Smith. A brilliant strategist who never went to West Point, he rose from a buck private to a three-star general. Eisenhower calls him one of history's greatest chiefs of staff. Today he is serving as U. S. Ambassador to Russia.
